HOOVER FIGHTS TO SAVE NAVY PACT

Today

Too Close to 5th Avenue.
Abe Cahan's Birthday.
An Army of Danger.
14 to One and 50 to One.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

NEW YORK'S respectability was shaken, figuratively and literally, at 4 o'clock last Saturday morning. A racketeer's bomb exploded on the window sill of a fine dwelling house at 26 West Fifty-third street, a few doors west of Fifth avenue, one block south of the town residence of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The bombed residence is occupied by a night club, and police say the bomb was a warning to the club that it must divide profits with the racketeers. This first bomb was not planned to kill, merely to serve notice.

AN ENGLISH lady, in 1916, when she could no longer get the right dog biscuit for her Chow, said:

"The war has ceased to be a joke."

New York says gang war ceases to be a joke when it reaches Fifth avenue.

New York's police believe that the racketeers are moving from Chicago to New York because of increased Chicago police activity. New York police act, with gangsters, less ruthlessly than they do in Chicago.

A CHICAGO beer seller "tipped" the police that racketeers were to visit him. The police hid in his beer flat and when the racketeers appeared, shot them dead.

Learning that gangsters were to raid a payroll of a big laundry, New York's police hid and arrested instead of killing the five gangsters.

Visiting gangsters should not, however, count on too much police gentleness in New York. Mayor Walker's new chief, Mulrooney, knows criminals, and how to discourage them. If shooting at sight is necessary, there will be plenty of it.

ABRAHAM CAHAN, editor and creator of "The Jewish Daily Forward" received many congratulations yesterday on his seventieth birthday. One came from Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, another from Adolph S. Ochs, editor of a different type.

Mr. Cahan, a brilliant writer and absolutely sincere, has spent his life teaching men and women to think for themselves. No work on earth is more important.

MANY COLUMNS are printed about fighting armies in China and possibilities of other wars among human beings. But more important to the human race, perhaps, is the extraordinary migration of rats, reported under way in Eastern Siberia.

Rats carry fleas, fleas carry disease most dangerous and fatal to men, bubonic plague, typhus and the pneumonic plague, contracted merely by inhaling the breath of its victims and able to strike down those who attend the victim's funeral.

RATS every year destroy $200,000,000 worth of property in the United States. But that is nothing compared with the harm that an invasion of an Eastern plague might do in a few weeks.

If governments would spend on the destruction of rats and mosquitoes one-tenth the amount they spent on the last war, this would be a better, safer world.

W. J. BRYAN made a good guess when he suggested sixteen to one as the ratio for gold and silver. The Bureau of Mines shows that, theoretically, it should be only fourteen to one.

During the past 437 years the world has produced fourteen billion ounces of silver, only one billion ounces of gold. That amount of silver would make a cube 114½ feet square.

MEXICO leads the world in silver production, with 40 per cent of the total. The United States comes next.

Relatively gold production has increased more rapidly than silver production. Nevertheless, because the nations have demonetized silver, gold is now worth 50 times as much per ounce as silver, although silver is only 14 times more plentiful.

Bryan could make another good "Cross of Gold" speech on that.

OSCAR BODENHAUSEN, traveling salesman, saved his dimes for 50 years in the savings bank and now begins a six months' tour of the world. The dimes will pay for it.

One good idea properly developed, 20 years ago, might have enabled Mr. Bodenhausen to travel around the world forever.

However, thrift is important. He who saves money, and has it ready, will have power to develop his own idea if he ever gets one. Without the savings his idea might die with him.

IN A SMALL Louisiana town, several children having died of infantile paralysis within a few days, the local authorities forbade all public gatherings.

And wisely the ban included theaters, churches and assemblies of every kind. In old days in time of plague the people hurried to the churches in search of miraculous protection and the plague was made worse.

ASKS SENATE LEADERS TO COMPEL ACTION

Looks to Watson and Borah To Prevent Adjournment; Robinson Defends Treaty

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—President Hoover today took cognizance of the serious opposition to the London naval pact and took steps to save it from threatened failure in the Senate, where today Senator Joe T. Robinson (Dem.), of Arkansas, opened defense arguments in behalf of the treaty.

As the Senate's battle over the treaty entered its second week today with prospects of its ratification depending chiefly on the administration's ability to maintain the constitutional quorum necessary for the legal transaction of business in the upper branch of Congress, the President had Senator Watson, administration leader, to breakfast in the White House, and later they called in Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, to discuss ways and means of preventing adjournment.

Political campaigns, business affairs at home and vacation retreats furnished an attractive lure to a Senate not overly impressed with the necessity for ratifying the treaty this summer. There were numerous observers who believed the opposition to the treaty would outlast the quorum, when was present all last week, and that administration leaders would be forced to permit an adjournment with postponement of action until the next regular session in December.

OPPONENTS PRESENT

During the first week, the treaty opposition helped the administration to maintain a quorum. While the Congressional record

Britain Puts Ban Upon Earl Carroll

LONDON, July 14.—(AP.)—The Daily Herald, Labor government organ, says that British port authorities have been instructed to refuse admittance to England to Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, if he should attempt to land.

The newspaper says that the order was apparently issued in case Carroll should attempt to escape a warrant for his arrest in connection with his present trial for the alleged immorality of his "Vanities."

END BLUE LAWS, SAYS PASTOR

"I have always been in favor of abolishing the blue laws—they don't fit in."

This statement was made by the Rev. Carl F. Lauer, pastor of the Bethany Luthern Church of Dormont, when questioned on the opening of Dormont's municipal swimming pool yesterday.

"It gives the young folks an outlet, a place to go on Sundays. The grown-ups have their country clubs where they play golf, their automobiles and other amusements, but what have the children of the apartments?"

Mr. Lauer, a member of the South Hills Ministerial Association, and former president of that body, continued that the proposition had been fought by the association two years ago. He said:

"In all that time, I have been a hopeless minority member."

"I was out of town yesterday, and when I made inquiries I

Coolidge Holds Congress One Problem of Unrest

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 14.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The economic progress not only of our own country but of the world at large has been retarded by three factors of uncertainty, the German bond issue, the tariff revision and the long session of the Congress. All of these have now been removed. Business can stand anything better than uncertainty. A bad situation it can write off and then start anew, but when confronted by the unknown it can only remain inactive. The universal over-subscription to the German loan was most encouraging. It shows the financial world has confidence in the Young plan and in the credit stability of Germany. It was also a gratifying illustration of a broad desire to restore Germany, and on our part, of a continuing purpose to help Europe. The worst and the best is now fairly well known about the tariff. The Congress will cease from troubling for a period of five months. International finance and domestic legislation have reached a more certain position. Certainty is the basis of business confidence.

GIRL HELD AGAIN ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Ex-Nurse Caught in Seizure Of Moonshine Distillery; Says She Is Innocent

Edna Kern, 21, was in custody of North Side police today for the second time in six weeks, charged with bootlegging.

She was arrested when police raided a dwelling at 2286 Charles street. They reported finding five five-gallon cans of moonshine, a 150-gallon still and 26 100-gallon vats in operation.

Miss Kern, the only person in the place at the time, was lodged in North Side Police Station, accused of violating the Snyder act.

Police report she said:

"I was engaged as housekeeper. I didn't really know moonshine was being made and didn't know there was a still or vats in the house. I am trying to go straight."

Miss Kern was first arrested May 29 in a liquor raid at 2816 McDowell street. At that time, police say, she admitted having entered the liquor business because there was more money in it than being a nurse.

She came here from Harrisburg, she told police, and learned how to make moonshine from people in the Woods Run district. She was held for court after her first arrest.

SAFES CRACKED IN 2 CHURCHES

Robbers broke into two churches last night, knocked the combination dials off safes and stole collections taken up at services Sunday.

The churches robbed were the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue, and the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, Bellefield and Fifth avenues.

The same gang is blamed by police for both robberies.

Entrance to the Sixth Presbyterian Church was gained through a rear window, James Washington, janitor, discovered the robbery when he entered the office of the church this morning. The Sunday School collection taken up yesterday, amounting to $25, was stolen. Larger collections had been taken home by Harry W. Grier, of Wilkins avenue, church treasurer.

In the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, the thieves obtained the entire collections taken yesterday. T. S. Munson, church secretary, discovered the robbery when he entered his office this morning.

The amount of loot is unknown.

Gangsters Hijack Six Cigaret Trucks

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—Gangland hijackers have turned from bootleg liquor to cigarets.

Robert Boyce, reputed gangster, was arrested yesterday, charged with hijacking a truck load of cigarets valued at $8,000. As he was being taken to headquarters, however, Sergt. Russell Dworak was forced by Boyce's companions to release him. Yesterday's theft was the sixth cigaret hijacking in recent weeks.

DORMONT MAN LOST IN SEA TRAGEDY

Five Others, One a Girl, Die as Sailboat Capsizes Off Massachusetts Coast

International News Service.

BOSTON, July 14.—A sailboat tragedy in Massachusetts Bay near the scene of the recent Fairfax-Pinthis disaster has brought death to five young men, one a Pittsburgher, and a girl.

While airplanes and seacraft searched the bay off Scituate shore this afternoon, the fishing schooner St. Rita, out of Gloucester, was picking up and bringing into its fish pier here the body of the only girl aboard the 15-foot catboat Noman, missing since Sunday.

Also aboard the St. Rita was Baden Garceau, of Scituate, lone survivor, who was found clinging to a spar. He was in a serious condition, required medical treatment, and at first was unable to give an account of what had happened off the Scituate shore.

CAPSIZES IN STORM

Capt. Vito Favaloro, of the St. Rita, was told that the Nomad capsized in a storm.

The body recovered was that of a girl of 16 in yachting togs. Her name was not known.

Occupants of the sailboat besides the girl and Garceau were: Charles Hall, Jr., owner and skipper; John Blower, of Pittsburgh; Walter Klaiber, Youngstown, O.; David Garsch, Concord; William Earle, Kansas City, Mo.

VICTIM FROM DORMONT

John Blower, 25, was a son of D. R. Blower, 3120 Gaylord street, Dormont. He had resided in Boston three years, and was connected with a bond house there. His father formerly was a mine inspector for Jones and Laughlin Steel Company at its Vesta mine, and resided in the vicinity of California, Pa.

AERIAL BEACON FAVORED HERE

Following tests over a period of several weeks, radio engineers of the airways division of the Department of Commerce, have returned to Washington with recommendations for the installation of an aerial beacon station in Pittsburgh.

Escapes Death In Fall of 100 Feet

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 14.—(AP.)—James Bowers, 35, employe at Government Dam No. 10 here, had a miraculous escape from death when he fell 100 feet from a railroad bridge to the bank of the Ohio river. He was taken to a hospital where it was determined that no bones were broken, although he suffered severe scalp wounds. What caused Bowers to fall has not been learned.

ATLANTA HAILS BOBBY JONES

ATLANTA, Ga., July 14.—(INS.)—Bobby Jones stole a march on the home folks of this flag-bedecked southern metropolis today, slipping quietly into a city charged with static expectation some three hours ahead of schedule.

So the best laid plans of the citizens' reception committee went slightly agley and Bobby was able to have a visit with his family before the monster welcoming parade got under way, shortly before noon.

The chubby arms of 2-year-old Bobby, Jr., and his sister, Clara, brought a spontaneous joy to the wizard of the links that all the world's golfing laurels could not equal.

Downtown Atlanta streets were a riot of color. Bobby rode majestically down Peachtree, the city's most famous thoroughfare, while 100,000 enthusiastic, admiring fellow-townsmen roared a welcome that eclipsed anything of its kind ever beheld here.

U. S. QUIZ ASKED FOR MOONEY

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(INS.)—Complete investigation of the San Francisco preparedness parade outrage of 1916 was proposed today by Senator Thomas Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, as a part of a nation-wide campaign in behalf of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings, sentenced to prison for the bombing.

Assailing Gov. C. C. Young, of California, for his refusal to pardon Mooney and Billings, the blind Senator urged friends of the two labor leaders to keep up the fight until the entire country is aroused.

Schall said there is a precedent for federal action in the investigation ordered by the late President Wilson and the fact that the outrage is linked with investigations of activities of German agents in California.

BRIDGEVILLE MEET ENDS TONIGHT

Open Gambling at Both Tracks Must Cease With Today's Cards, Says Park

Betting on dog racing in Allegheny County will stop after tonight.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park today ordered a squad of county detectives to notify the operators of the track along the Freeport road, near Blaw Knox, that they must put an end to gambling.

A few hours before the order was issued, the operators of the Bridgeville track announced that they would close down their track voluntarily and that there would be no racing there after tonight.

"OPEN GAMBLING"

District Attorney Park's order to serve notice on the operators of the Gurasuta Kennel Club, operating the track along Freeport road, followed a report by county detectives that gambling was going on there openly Saturday night.

The detectives had visited the track Saturday night on orders of District Attorney Park with orders to participate in the betting, if any were in progress.

They reported back to him that wagers were being made on the races without any efforts at concealment.

MINISTERS COMPLAINED

Park had send a squad of detectives to the track following written complaints by the borough council of Blaw Knox, through its secretary, W. R. Gripps, and by the Allegheny Valley Ministerial Association, through Rev. E. Harold Miller, pastor of the Brackenridge Methodist Episcopal Church.

Gripps wrote Park that the track was reputed to be maintained through gambling.

Park said today:

"I would have closed the Guyasuta track tonight had I been able to have gotten evidence together earlier in the day. Their advertising is out and a large crowd will be there, so it seemed most expedient to

N. Y. Subway Separates Family on Way Here

It costs heartaches and worry to become separated in a big city. Michael McDonough, 37, on his way to Pittsburgh from Portland, Me., to hunt work, with his wife Mary, 35, and their children, Stephen 7, Mary 5, and Michael, Jr., 23 months old, know that to their anxiety.

In shifting from the Grand Central Station in New York to the Pennsylvania, they became separated in a subway.

Michael, ticketed to Pittsburgh, went to the right train and arrived yesterday at 910 Locust street, accompanied by the junior members of the family.

Mrs. McDonough, who appealed to police, is somewhere between Pittsburgh and New York, on the way to join her husband. He asked tearfully regarding her whereabouts this morning.

The McDonoughs came over from Ireland three years ago, when work was plenty, but it has been slack up in Portland so the family decided to move here.

"Begorra, I'll be a little more careful in big cities next time."

NYE'S REPORT MISLEADING, SHE SAYS

Republican Senate Nominee Explains Outlay as 'Slush Inquiry' Opens in Illinois

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—Appearing before the Senate inquiry into the Illinois Republican senatorial campaign, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick today defended her personal expenditure of $252,500 and said an additional $67,214 was used in her behalf by volunteer organizations which supported her campaign.

Mrs. McCormick presented a 7,000-word statement in which she criticized Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the special campaign funds committee, for asserting his investigation had found out she spent approximately $325,000 instead of the $252,500 she had reported.

The Republican senatorial nominee said Nye's statement was inaccurate and misleading based on the fact she voluntarily had submitted a supplemental report setting forth the spending of the $67,214 before the investigators had inquired into those expenditures.

USED BY THREE GROUPS

The $67,214 was used by three organizations and was obtained by contributions from friends and relatives, Mrs. McCormick said. The Voters' Progress League used $44,000, the Illinois Young People's Republican Clubs, $15,000, and the Ruth Hanna McCormick Volunteers, $8,214.

Mrs. McCormick said her report of expenses was a document which should be scrutinized by all citizens interested in the problem of campaign expenditures. The report, for the first time, tells the whole story without any confusing complications, either as to source or money nature of disbursements, exact total expended or who spent it, she added:

"I hope my report thus will be a contribution to the public effort to understand our primary election system and offer a basis for remedial legislation."

DENIES ANY ALLIANCES

Mrs. McCormick reiterated that she had conducted her campaign solely as an independent Republican candidate, without alliance with any faction or group. She washed her hands of the Chicago "city hall machine" and all other Cook County organizations but acknowledged that she undoubtedly had been more or less benefited by the opposition of various factions to the candidacy of Senator Charles S. Deneen, her opponent.

She called attention to the fact her campaign cost only $42.63 for each 1,000 votes, as compared with the $105 for each 1,000 expended in the Presidential campaign of President Hoover in Illinois.

She referred to the charge given wide publication that $1,000,000 had been spent in her campaign, challenged that statement and repeated that the account of her expenses, made under oath to the committee May 1, was correct and complete.

DEFEATED BY FACTIONS

Mrs. McCormick said Senator Deneen had the opposition of five different Republican factions in Cook County, and that this fight for local control resulted in his defeat by those who were protecting their own organizations, but with none of which she had any alliance or understanding.

She told the committee that the statement the city hall organization "delivered" her victory in Cook County ignored the fact she led some of the city hall candidates for important offices in the county from 50,000 to 150,000 votes, and won 55 counties outside of Cook, getting a downstate plurality of 49,000.

Iowans Protesting Arrest of Officials

DUBUQUE, Iowa, July 14.—(AP.)—Citizens have wired a protest to Senator Smith W. All four men are out on bond after arraignment before a United States commissioner. The dry enforcement officers who caused the arrests had been previously fined for traffic violations.

of a new transcontinental route from New York to Los Angeles by way of Pittsburgh, Columbus and St. Louis.

The northern route over which National Air Transport has been carrying the mail from New York through Cleveland and Chicago has been equipped with the radio beacon for several years and it has proven itself a great help to night flying. One of the stations on this route is located at Bellefonte.

Two types are in use at the present time on the N. A. T. route, the aural and the visual "radio rays." Which type will be set up here has not been determined.

The two government radio engineers who made the survey here returned to Washington last week. They are J. H. Nicholson and D. F. Sutton. They are expected to make their reports and recommendations sometime this week.

Since the Pittsburgh beacon is included in the current fiscal year's appropriations, work cannot begin later than next spring and may start as early as this fall, it is said.

Senior U. S. Surgeon In Canal Zone Dies

PANAMA CITY, July 14.—(AP.)—Dr. Paul G. Preble, 48, senior surgeon of the United States public health service here, died Sunday. The body will be sent back to his Auburn, Me., home.

Since he came here in January Dr. Preble sought unceasingly to obtain a greater measure of cooperation of the Canal Zone and Panama health authorities. Although his fight was in vain, the negotiations apparently were progressing at his death.

McClenny, today, after returning last night with her companion, Harry Dickinson, who the girl's father had arrested on the charge of "abducting" his daughter without her parents' knowledge or consent.

The two weeks they spent together in a Waynesboro, Va., rooming house apartment came to an abrupt end late Saturday, when they were discovered and returned to Richmond—the girl to her parents, and Dickinson, a filling station operator, to jail.

Dickinson was bailed from Henrico County jail in $1,000 to appear for police court hearing July 18, with N. H. Dickinson, and Johnnie Leadbetter, his garage associates, arrested on charges of being "accessories" in the disappearance of the girl.

Miss McClenny in a signed statement given to a Richmond newspaper absolved Dickinson of all blame. She said she went with him willingly, and with full knowledge "that he was married, and not divorced."

She said they hitch-hiked to Waynesboro.

DRY LAW HIT IN LUTHERAN MEETING

Walther League Head Says Changing Constitution Lessens U. S. Freedom

CLEVELAND, July 14.—(AP.)—About 2,000 young members of the Walther League, Lutheran Church society, in convention here, today heard E. J. Gallmeyer, Fort Wayne, Ind., their president, declare that "tampering with the United States Constitution for the purpose of regulating personal conduct" places the Constitution "in jeopardy."

Gallmeyer said:

"Millions of our citizens believe that our Constitution should not be tampered with but should be left as a fundamental guide. The great majority of our Lutheran group hold to this view for two important reasons.

"In the first place, because of the great prosperity which our country had enjoyed under our God-favored Constitution. Learned economists hold that our progress and wealth are directly traceable to our fundamental law, for it made possible individual development. Then, having produced these, it should not be tampered with by propagandists.

FREEDOM IN DANGER

"Secondly, we hold that our religious freedom, our greatest boon under the Constitution, is placed in jeopardy when this fundamental instrument is used as a statute for regulatory laws.

"I am talking about tampering with the Constitution for the purpose of regulating personal conduct. If well-meaning and sincere people can tell us what to eat and to drink, what assurance have we that they will not very shortly tell us how, when and where we shall worship?

"Is this a complete separation when religious bodies force upon the country their particular religious views and, using the arm of the state, compel millions of people who do not hold these same views to conform to their view-points? I thank God that our ministry has not permitted itself to be paid to run the politics of the country but rather that they have confined their work to being true shepherds of the flock.

MISERY NOT NECESSARY

"We have learned that we need not fold our hands, sit in the corner with long-drawn sanctimonious faces, go through this interesting and very worthwhile life and be miserable, in order to be Christians."

Gallmeyer said young people of today are superior in intellectual development over the young people of a generation ago, but that they need more reverence for God and things religious.

SCHWAB TELLS OF FIGHT HERE FOR PROXIES

Failure of Julian Kennedy Deal in Merger Battle Related in Deposition

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 14—(AP.)—The salaries of steel magnates were under scrutiny today as trial of the suit to enjoin merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with Bethlehem Steel Corporation went into its eighth day in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court.

Effort of attorneys for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests, opposed to the merger, to learn how much of the profits of both companies went to their officers, was brought out in a deposition from John Tod, vice president of the Youngstown company, who now is in Europe.

SALARIES SECRET

Tod testified that, although he had been a director of the Youngstown company for seven years, he never learned the salaries paid to other officers. He also testified he did not know that President Eugene S. Grace, of Bethlehem, "received $1,600,000 a year."

A report of Price, Waterhouse Company, accountants, on the condition of the two steel firms, was not seen by Tod prior to the casting of his vote for the merger, he said.

SCHWAB VISITS HERE

A deposition from Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem, told of visiting Julian Kennedy, steel engineer, in Pittsburgh, in an effort to obtain his proxy on 4,200 shares of Youngstown company stock. The visit was during the proxy battle preceding the voting of the merger by the Youngstown stockholders and was made at the suggestion of President Grace, he said.

Schwab testified Kennedy would not give his proxy to either side, but offered to sell the stock at $200 a share. Declining the offer, Schwab said, he reported the result of his visit to Grace and had nothing further to do with the obtaining of proxies.

Elton Hoyt II, a partner in Pickands, Mather & Co., ore firm, who was placed on the stand, agreed he was "quite active" in the purchase of Youngstown Company stock prior to the stockholders' meeting on April 8, 1930, and that he purchased it with a desire to vote it.

Bess won John Ringling's heart many years ago. The circus was then playing Prairie-Du-Chien, Wis., and Bess pulled the whole circus out of town, just a couple laps ahead of the sheriff and a load of attachment papers. At least, that's the story circus people tell.

The Peabody Museum at Yale will inherit Bess.

HOOVER FIGHTS FOR TREATY

reported as many as 61 senators present, the largest number present at any one time was 57, with the daily sessions starting three different times with only the necessary 49 present. In each instance from 10 to 15 treaty opponents were numbered among those present. If the opposition should suddenly decide to abandon the session, the administration probably would be unable to obtain a quorum. Such an impasse would bring a quick adjournment.

The treaty gives the United States an "improved status" among the navies of the world, promotes national security and allays international rivalry, Senator Robinson declared today in the first formal defense of the treaty by any delegate to the conference.

PLEADS FOR TREATY

Robinson pleaded with his colleagues to ratify the treaty, declaring:

"Its defeat will provoke an era of insecurity, dread and fear, making probable the initiation of naval programs in excess of anything ever conceived since the beginning of history."

He told the Senate the United States either could accept the treaty limitations or prepare itself to spend billions in a naval race with Great Britain and Japan.

The Arkansas Senator took the initiative in defending the treaty, although administration leaders had expected Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, the other senatorial delegate to London, would speak today.

Although the treaty was negotiated last spring and sent to the Senate in May, Reed has yet to make a detailed speech, explaining its advantages to the American people. He has engaged in extraneous debate on a number of occasions and once declared the treaty either would have to be ratified or the United States would be threatened by war with Japan.

JAPANESE BOGEY

The Pennsylvanian may enlarge upon this threat to American security. In expressing a fear of war with Japan, if the treaty were not ratified, Reed said he felt the agreement furnished the most practical means of halting a naval race between the Japanese Empire and the United States. If such a race were undertaken, he added, it could lead only to the vast expenditure of money and a war with the Oriental empire.

Treaty opponents ridiculed Reed's warning. They declared the United States could outbuild any other nation in the world, if a naval race were justified, and that the United States could build such a Navy as to make it secure against all the other navies of the world combined.

They argued, however, that such a race was preposterous and that defeat of the London treaty merely would revert naval limitation to the terms of the Washington treaty, which has prevented even a warlike gesture for the last seven years.

POOL RAID ON LEVINSON FLOPS

Benny Goes Free for Lack Of Evidence; Police Won't Suffer for Bungled Job

Police Inspector Albert Beebe, of the First District, declared today that he would not suspend two patrolmen for failure to obtain evidence as to who leased a building at 518 Wylie avenue, raided Saturday as a suspected headquarters for a large clearing house lottery.

Following the raid, Benny Levinson, 47, was arrested on a written complaint by a citizen that he was the "master mind" of the lottery ring. A large number of ticket stubs and figures, showing receipts were seized in the raid.

At a hearing yesterday, Levinson denied all knowledge of these records and said he did not know how they came to be in the building. The raiding officers, Patrolmen Levi Neff and R. Miller, were unable to say whether Levinson leased the building, and Levinson was ordered discharged for lack of evidence by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones.

Asked if he would suspend the patrolmen, Inspector Beebe said:

"No. The matter is a closed book."

He admitted ordering the raid on written complaint of a citizen, but refused to give the citizen's name.

allow them to operate tonight, and at that time make an announcement to their patrons that the races would be closed."

JUDGE RELEASES POLICE

He continued:

"I have been officially informed that the Bridgeville track is closing tonight with a derby. If they should attempt to continue their meet further they will be dealt with in the same manner I am dealing with the Guyasuta Kennel club track."

Park issued his orders before he had received information on the outcome of a fight against dog-race betting in Westmoreland County.

At Greensburg today Judge Charles D. Copeland dissolved a preliminary injunction issued two weeks ago against the state police restraining them from interfering with the dog races at the New Kensington track. The court held that the bill of complaint on which the injunction had been granted was not supported by the necessary affidavits.

BLAWNOX COMPLAINT

Park was interested in the legal aspects of the case to see whether the court would uphold the injunction against the police.

The letter on complaint written by Blawnox Council to Park follows:

"There has been constructed in O'Hara township on the Freeport road a dog racing track, and the report here is that it i sproposed to maintain it by gambling on the races.

"It is the feeling of the borough council that any public gambling institution would be very harmful to this community and we therefore request that you use all of the efforts of your office to see that the law is complied with."

OHIO 'BLUE' SUNDAY ENFORCEMENT FAILS

Suspect in Furnace Slaying Guarded to Foil Suicide

JEFFERSON SHERIFF GIVES UP

"No Use Trying to Close Up Steubenville on Sabbath,' He Says; Won't Arrest

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 14.—Ohio's Blue Law is unenforceable and any attempt to enforce it would meet with popular disapproval, Sheriff William Yost, of Jefferson County, decided yesterday in reversing his earlier plan to demand strict compliance with the law.

Steubenville had a taste of the Blue Sunday directed by the 99-year-old statute, but it was by the voluntary closing of a majority of the store and shopkeepers.

Those remaining open were unmolested by the sheriff, who is seeking re-election. He declared he would make no arrests and would merely entertain any requests for prosecutions.

SHERIFF WON'T ACT

Sheriff Yost and his deputies cruised city and county during the day and noted violations, but took no action. At his office the sheriff said:

"With few exceptions, merchants and dealers complied with my request to keep closed. If anybody wants to file affidavits against those persons who violated the Blue Law, I will receive them, but I do not intend to file any charges myself."

WANTS COURT ORDER

As to his course in the future Sheriff Yost said hereafter he would act only upon information or court order. He continued:

"I discovered after I got into this thing that I was forced to modify here and discriminate there in favor of this or that essential, so I decided there wasn't much use trying to close the county up tight and I won't try it again."

Cigar and drug stores, and most confectioneries remained closed all day voluntarily. The municipal swimming pool and golf links were thrown open without charge and thousands turned out.

NEWSPAPERS SOLD

Sunday newspapers were sold as usual. Newsboys set up their stands in front of every church. They were not molested. Country clubs and miniature golf courses operated without complaint being made against them. Practically all gas stations were open for business as usual.

At Amsterdam, O., a theater which has been operating five years on Sunday, remained closed, as did the Warner theaters here. The Warner managers will go on trial in Common Pleas Court some time this week for operating a motion picture show Sunday a week ago.

Steubenville was practically deserted.

STRANGERS KEPT OUT

Opening of the pool was ordered by the Council at its last meeting, after members were told that most of the residents of the borough favored the action.

The only added restriction to its use was that only residents of the community be admitted. Close tab kept by police indicated that no outsiders gained entry.

With Pittsburgh and Philadelphia forming the nucleus for an organization to fight the Blue Laws, a concerted drive will be made against the statutes at the 1931 session of the legislature, according to Representative M. A. Musmanno.

GIRL'S BODY BURNED IN FIREBOX

Payroll of $750 Also Lost; Boxer Called 'The Sheik' Denies Making Confession

International News Service.

PORTLAND, Me., July 14.—To his lawyer in the Cumberland County jail this afternoon James M. Mitchell, 21, denied he had made a confession, either verbal or written, that he killed Miss Lillian I. MacDonald, 22, whose body was placed in a firebox.

Defense Attorney Joseph E. Connellan said Mitchell had repudiated his "confession" during a conference following his arraignment, where he pleaded not guilty as hundreds of men and women sought to catch a glimpse of him.

Connellan added that the defense plea probably would be insanity.

Mitchell was under close guard today, the authorities fearing he would attempt to end his life.

Outside the police station 200 men and boys waited with morbid curiosity to catch a glimpse of Mitchell, an amateur boxer known as "The Sheik," on his walk of a dozen feet through an alley to court for arraignment.

PICKED UP ON STREET

Meanwhile, the youthful shipping clerk who confessed the authorities said, that he beat the girl insensible with a furnace shaker before stuffing her unconscious form into the furnace, was a different appearing youth from the dapper lad picked up by police on Washington avenue while "watching the dolls parade," as he put it.

Mitchell stood up under several hours' of grilling. But when confronted with the furnace shaker, the girl's ring and a piece of iron pipe, he nearly collapsed the authorities said, and confessed he struck the girl clerk down when she slapped his face for advances he made when she visited the basement, to distribute a $750 payroll.

DID NOT WANT MONEY

According to the confession, as given out, Mitchell said he did not want the $750 in pay envelopes carried by Miss MacDonald. But before placing her body and the money in the furnace, he took his own pay envelope out of the box in her hand. All the money was burned except that contained in seven envelopes which sifted through the grate into the ash pan.

Sunday morning, he said, he went to church as usual and en route home purchased a magazine devoted to crime and crime solution. This he read until dinner time. After dinner, he was with "the boys" on "the corner" watching "the dolls go by," he added.

NEW YORK, July 14.—(INS.)—Actual formation of clauses of the new miners'-operators' agreement, to replace the present one expiring September 1, was to be taken up this week, with the resumption today of the conference of committees of the two bodies.

Discussion of differences between the Pennsylvania anthracite miners and the operators, which occupied all of last week without a definite agreement being reached, was expected to continue this week, for a few days, but it was confidently predicted that the committees would be able to meet at a half-way point.

The principal differences are on the questions of wages and the check-off system. The operators have suggested a wage cut.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, is taking an active part in the tri-district conference.

Search Jungle for Flier, Left Hurt, Starving

RANGOON, Burma, July 14.—(AP.)—Searching parties penetrating the Southern Burmese jungle today hoped to find Erick Hook, British airman, left dying last week by a buddy, Jimmie Matthews, who stumbled on, he said, to find help for both of them.

Little hope was held for success of the quest. Matthews himself, bruised and worn from the crash of their England to Australia airplane 10 days ago and the subsequent march to civilization, discouraged hope. The jungle where he left Hook is known for its predatory wild beasts and hyenas.

Matthews Saturday reached Prome, 160 miles north of Rangoon, on the left bank of the Irawadi River, with the story that he and Hook cracked up their plane on a mountainside July 3 while flying between Akyab, Burma, and Rangoon, in an attempt to best the 15-day flight record from England to Australia.

Both were injured in the crash, but Hook much more severely. Matthews said that in the next few days as they tried to reach civilization he was forced often to carry the more badly hurt man on his back. Finally beset by hunger, thirst, and the damp dismal malaria country through which they passed, they decided it would be best for him to go on alone and seek help.

Paris Idol, Defying Rich Hubby, Broadway-Bound

PARIS, July 14.—(INS.)—Broadway may soon have a brand new star in the person of Mlle. Jane Aubert, darling of the Paris stage, whose martial difficulties with her husband, Nelson Morris, of Chicago, have attracted worldwide attention during the last few months.

In one of many suits and counter-suits since their romance went on the rocks, Morris obtained an injunction from the Paris courts forbidding Mlle. Aubert to dance any longer in Parisian revues, on the grounds the allowance he gave her was more than sufficient to keep her in luxuries and that he did not wish his wife to pursue a stage career.

Confronted with this legal document, Mlle. Aubert left her musical-hall job and retired to her chateau just outside of Paris to think things over. The result of her cogitations was revealed today in her purchase of steamer passage for America for August 6, with the intention of staging a Broadway appearance immediately after her arrival.

Morris, grandson, heir and namesake of the multi-millionaire Chicago meat packer, is consulting attorneys on his course of procedure. If he finds it impossible to bar her from the Broadway stage, it is understood he may attempt to obtain another injunction forbidding her to leave this country.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 14 — AP — A dentist who obeyed that impulse and shot a cat who disturbed his slumber with nocturnal ardor and mating calls on the back fence has been made defendant in a $5,000 damage suit brought by the cat's spinster owner.

The suit filed by Miss Mary Byrd Hutchcraft against Dr. Lunsford Taylor alleges that the deadcat inflicted on Jerry, a "severe and dangerous wound," resulting great trouble to his owner who nursed him back to health, thereby preserving one of Jerry's nine lives.

Miss Hutchcraft's petition further sets out that the cat by its attentive interest and affectionate manner in conduct towards her affords her great solace, pleasure and satisfaction, and that she was damaged in the sum of $5,000.

JOBLESS POLL UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP.)—Some time during the coming week the Census Bureau will be ready to announce its second installment of the count of the unemployed in the country.

Preliminary figures make it evident the total to be announced will be about half the final figure for the whole country and it will indicate roughly that 1,200,000 persons in territory containing some 60,000,000 total inhabitants are to be classified as persons able to work, accustomed to work, and who were unable to find work on the day before a census taker visited them.

Though there was a considerable skepticism by statisticians and others over the first announcement the bureau made last month, indicating more than 500,000 unemployed in territory containing a quarter of the population of the United States, the extension of the tabulations has not altered the showing anticipated by the first compilation. Accumulating returns in the bureau continue to indicate that over the country as a whole, the unemployed represent about 2 per cent of the total population.

MERCY SLAYER SOBS REGRET

WALTON, N. Y., July 14.—(Universal)—Praying for death for himself that he may join the mentally deficient daughter he loved—and killed because he loved her—Andrew L. Beers, trembling and stooped with the weight of 76 years, repented his mad act.

Unlike the many "mercy" slayers of the past, the kind father who has the sympathy of all his neighbors for the years of sacrifice he devoted to his helpless daughter has come to believe his act was not justified.

Sobbing intermittently as he talked in the Delaware County jail at Delhi, near here, the aged man frequently passing a toil-worn hand over his face, said:

"It was an awful thing to do. I would not do it now.

"The only way I can get off is through death, and I wish it would happen very soon."

The report quotes a letter dated July 7 from Mr. Root to Ralph M. Easley, secretary of the federation. The letter concluded with the following statement:

"Now we have reason to believe that an assault is being made by secret means, supported by the resources of a great empire, aimed at the destruction of our system of government, and we find that the Federal government has no police force available for our protection. Of course, such a force ought to be provided."

Real Estate

County Treasurer John Francies has begun the erection of a country home near the old Washington road in Upper St. Clair township. The house will be a low rambling cottage set in a grove of ancient oaks on a hill that commands a view of 10 miles in all directions. The home will be ready for occupancy about October 1.

Mr. Francies acquired a 27-acre tract of the old Fife farm more than 20 years ago and has held it for a home site. The property came down through the Fifes from a tomahawk survey granted in 1765 to William and John Fife. The original settlers built a cabin and fought off the Indians until 1775 when they returned across the mountains and served in the Continental Army throughout the American Revolution. They returned after the war and with the Johnsons, Conners, Douglasses, Gilfillans and other pioneers, built up the prosperous settlement of St. Clair township. A part of the same tract, known as Southern Highlands, recently was developed by Stevens, Williams Company.

Kane Brothers, rental managers for the Investment Building, have leased to McCrady Rodgers Company the entire eighteenth and nineteenth floors of that structure for a term of years at a gross rental of $96,000. After extensive alterations the general offices of the original McCrady Brothers, of Braddock, and the long established quarters of the Rodgers Sand Company at 1 Wood street, will be merged in the new offices. Possession will be taken August 1. The transaction was handled by Leonard P. Kane.

During the week closing July 9, 332 mortgages were placed on record in Allegheny County amounting to $1,681,547.92, according to the report of C. C. C. Stotler Company. Thirty-nine of these amounting to $169,331.35 were purchase money mortgages.

Straight mortgages were recorded as follows: To corporations, 100 mortgages amounting to $817,837.05; to building and loan associations, 118 mortgages amounting to $447,800; to individuals, 75 mortgages amounting to $246,779.52.

W. F. Bell has made application for a permit to erect two brick and frame dwellings in Beechwood boulevard, Fifteenth Ward. The estimated cost is $18,000.

F. C. Beinhauer has applied for a building permit for a brick dwelling at 2568 Wenzel way, Nineteenth Ward, to cost about $8,500. F. K. Becker, of West Liberty avenue, is the contractor.

Husband Had to Do Her Work

"When my baby was a month old, I took a heavy cold and after that I felt miserable. Could not lift anything. My husband had to help me with the housework. I was so weak I could not do a washing. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the Kittaning paper and I gave it a good trial. Before I had taken half a bottle, I found the difference. I do all my own work now and I have told others how much this medicine helped me."—Mrs. Alice Bassett, Cadogan, Pennsylvania.

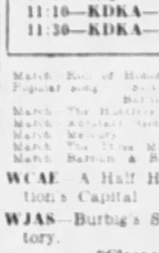
We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

THAT LITTLE thing called LOVE appears to be the biggest thing on the radio tonight.

Love songs—the best of them—have been woven into a theme for the General Motors Family Party, WCAE at 9:30.

"Flower Song," from "Carmen," and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" will give the program plenty of atmosphere. They will be sung by Frederick Jagel, youthful Metropolitan tenor. Mr. Jagel will also sing Grieg's "I Love Thee and the Prize Song from "Die Meistersinger" which is regarded the most difficult of tenor solos.



Frederick Jagel

"Liebestraum" which music critics hold the equal in beauty to Franz Liszt's other famous work "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" will be an orchestra presentation. Five operetta love waltzes with interludes by Mr. Jagel will conclude the concert.

Owen Brothers of NBC fame will produce a variety program in the KDKA studios at 7:45 o'clock.

Plaine of Dreams WCAE at 10, will offer Cadman's "At Dawning," played by a string ensemble.

The new KDKA at Saxonburg is testing with 20,000 watts—or one-tenth of the transmitter's capacity. You may hear them occasionally from midnight until 3 a. m.

Won't "Howdy" Clark be surprised at the Conneaut Lake golf course this week when he swipes a 10-cent imitation pellet dropped in his bag by the playful Francis Owen?

Several years ago—

Frederick Jagel sang "Carmen" in Rome. A young Scotch girl, Nancy Weir, played the title role. It was the beginning of a romance which culminated in Mr. and Mrs. She'll listen in NBC studios tonight when he sings the beautiful "Flower Song."

Paul Siple, the Boy Scout with Admiral Byrd on his South Pole triumph, is to speak for KDKA listeners the latter part of August.

A gross income of a million dollars in the next five years is the assurance given Vincent Lopez for signing a contract with the St. Regis Hotel management in New York. Peculiarly enough, the contract covers broadcasting at any time—and television.

Floyd Gibbons looks with disdain on airplanes; gets his greatest thrill out of motorboating at break-neck speed in the Hudson.

Carefree vacation days demand Kotex

for your sanitary protection

Even travel offers no possibility of inconvenience or embarrassment with this modern form of protection.

ENJOY every day of your vacation, free from any thought of discomfort or inconvenience. Kotex removes all the old worries that used to interfere with carefree days.

Kotex can be disposed of instantly and completely. And you can buy it anywhere you may go. It is the favored sanitary protection of smart and dainty women all over the civilized world.

Freedom for sports

Kotex assures perfect freedom for sports, because it is so light and cool, and so carefully shaped. The corners are rounded for perfect fit. This makes Kotex inconspicuous under the lightest frock.

Kotex is made of Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding, the identical material used by 85% of America's leading hospitals. It absorbs five times more than cotton, which means your Kotex pad can be five times as light as any cotton pad.

Stays soft for hours

And Kotex stays light and fluffy for hours. This is because of its unusual construction. It is made of filmy layers of Cellucotton, which permit free circulation of air.

Kotex deodorizes, so doubly important in warm weather. The deodorant used is safe, gentle and soothing.

Try Kotex. Buy it at any drug or department store—just ask for "a package of Kotex." Kotex Company, Chicago, Illinois.

KOTEX IS SOFT. . .

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

2—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

3—Deodorizes . . . safely, thoroughly, by a special process.

4—Disposable, instantly, completely.

RISING DRY LAW COST ALLEGED

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP)—The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment issued a statement today estimating the cost for enforcement of the dry law during 1929 was $4,000,000 more than for the preceding year.

Prohibition cases in federal courts increased from 40,748 to 56,455, it said. Apparently, these additional court costs accounted for most of the increase in prohibition enforcement cost reported by the association.

Estimating a loss in revenue to the government from prohibition, the association placed the "total loss" to the nation last year at $959,872,870.

KONJOLA ENDS RHEUMATISM AND OTHER AILMENTS

Pittsburgh Lady Eager to Praise New Medicine for Wonderful Relief From Painful Ailments.

"Konjola is the medicine I should have had in the first place." Time after time, in one form or another, this statement has been made by grateful men and women of all ages who have found prompt and lasting relief from ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Scientifically compounded from 32 ingredients, 22 of which are the juices of well-known medicinal roots and herbs, Konjola attacks the very source of the ailment, sweeps impurities from the system and stimulates the ailing organs. Taken regularly over a six to eight-week period, this master medicine has made a record that would challenge belief were the actual facts not known and verified. Read the experience of Mrs. Olive Gold, 45 Henderson Street, North Side, Pittsburgh, then see the Konjola Man at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, and hear all the story. Here is Mrs. Gold's experience in her own words:

MRS. OLIVE GOLD

"I suffered for a long time with nervous indigestion. My general condition was badly run-down and I did not rest at night. I had little or no appetite and often went for days with little or no food. Rheumatism centered in my arms and back and the pains were frightful. There were times when I could not raise my arms. Food fermented in my stomach and the accumulated gas caused bloating and pains that sometimes seemed unbearable.

"Three bottles of Konjola brought about an amazing change in my condition. I no longer bloated after meals and the pains from gas passed away. I slept well at night and my nerves were calm. The pains from rheumatism grew less and less until they finally disappeared. I recommended Konjola to my son, who took it with the same wonderful results. I will always be a booster for this great medicine."

And so it goes—the same glad story whenever this great medicine is given a chance to make good.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, explaining the merits of this new and different medicine. FREE SAMPLES GIVEN by the Konjola Man. Konjola is sold also at all Dow Drug Stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

TRUE STORIES of CONSTRUCTIVE BANKING No. 2

builds comfortable income

He was night watchman in one of the steel mills. His income was solely from his job, yet today he is worth approximately $25,000.00.

Years ago he began systematically to deposit part of each pay in a Savings Account at the Farmers. The account grew and with the aid of financing by the bank, he purchased a home.

Later, with his home clear, he began to buy bonds through the bank and continued to build capital by regular bi-monthly savings deposits. Today, retired on pension, he is enjoying the benefits of a planned financial program worked out through this bank.

THE OFFICE WIFE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Anne Decides to Find Work And New Happiness

CHAPTER XXXIII.

No, it hadn't been Polly's fault. She was the sort of girl a man wanted to take care of. She didn't make you feel inferior and schoolboyish. She made you feel every inch of your height and every pound of your weight, and every atom of your strength, and perhaps a bit more.

Anne felt lost her. He'd never had her really.

After a moment he walked back to Polly and set her on her feet.

"It's pretty much of a mess, isn't it?" he asked gently. "Come on; let's go back to the house."

"Please," Polly begged, "please forgive me."

"It doesn't matter," he said casually, and went with her back to the bungalow. He was not thinking of Polly then; he was thinking of Anne.

It would not be until much later that he would realize how completely, how gladly, how gratefully he had come to forgive them both.

When Anne returned to the car she found her mother waiting for her. She looked at her daughter and asked merely, "Is it all right?"

Anne nodded and got in beside her, and they drove back to the red-brick house. Mrs. Murdock talking fluently and irrelevantly. She did not mention their completed errand again until they drew up at the house. Then she said:

"Your father will have to be told. He won't like it."

So when Murdock, smoking his pipe on the little porch, asked, "Where have you two been?" Anne told him.

"We went to see Teddy," she answered. "I've broken my engagement, father."

Mother Defends Anne

"I'm not surprised," Murdock answered evenly. "Girls nowadays don't think anything of breaking their promises. Off with the old love, on with the new—that's their game. You'll be sorry for this, Anne. O'Hara's a good boy, and deserves better treatment than what you gave him. He's a wonder, he'll be a success. You'll travel a long road before you'll meet one like him again."

His wife spoke up, as usual, in her child's defense. "Anne did right," she declared. "I'd rather see her turn at the very altar and run away than talk herself into a marriage she'd regret."

"Of course you'd take up for the girl," her husband said resignedly.

Anne spoke miserably: "I'm sorry you're upset about it, father. But I don't love him and I couldn't go through with it."

"I'm not upset," her father denied, "but it seems to me that you should have found out you didn't love him before you gave him your word."

Anne's shoulders moved in a gesture of hopelessness. She went into the house and up to her hot bedroom, leaving her parents on the porch.

Dad Sorry

Molly sat down by her husband. Anne's unhappy, she said simply. "Don't make it any harder for her, dad."

"I won't," he said. "Only in my day a word given was a word kept. I don't understand these young folk, Molly."

After a while he rose and went heavily into the house. Molly lay in a creaking wicker chair, smiled as she heard him mount the stairs.

Murdock thrust his head in at Anne's door. He asked gruffly, "You all right?"

Yes, Anne answered, and added, "Come in, won't you?"

She was lying on her bed, fully dressed. Murdock went in and sat down beside her and put his hand awkwardly on her hair. He was an undemonstrative man, and Anne knew what embarrassment the gesture cost him.

"Sorry I rode you," he said. "Don't worry. Young bodies heal quickly, Annie."

He hadn't called her "Annie" since she was a small child. Now it slipped out unawares, and she loved it.

She put her cheek against his shoulder. "It's all right, Dad," she said. "I made a bad mistake, that's all. And I hate to realize I haven't been on the square."

Thinks of Polly

"You'll come out O. K.," he assured her.

When he left she undressed and went to bed. She wondered momentarily what had passed between Polly and Ted after her departure. She found herself envying the other girl's lack of emotional reticence. She had turned under Anne's eyes from an unintelligent essentially soft and clinging unimportant person into a virago, a shrew, a passionate woman battling desperately for—for whom? For a man who did not love her.

But he would come to love her, Anne thought in a flash of prophecy. She never would give him dreams, and her own dreams would be centered not upon Ted once she possessed him, but upon Ted's children. But after all a man would forget he ever had wanted dreams.

"He will forget me," thought Anne with gratitude and relief, and an illogical feminine sting of wounded vanity.

Dreams of Eaton

Well, that was over. That way of escape was closed to her. Why, she wondered, had she ever sought it? She faced the answer that she had engaged herself to Teddy in pique—out of hurt pride.

She thought of Lawrence Eaton and she knew that she would not cease to love him until her young blood ran cool and her senses starved or were blunted. And she faced that, too, without regret. To have loved wonderfully was worth all heartache. And now that she had battled through conflicting emotion to a sense of surety, if not peace, she could adjust her life.

She would find work, she would make friends, she would be, if not happy, then not unhappy. Somewhere in the world he was alive, somewhere he visioned and achieved and had his being. With that she had to be, if not content, at least reconciled.

She fell asleep dreaming that she saw him again, that he held her in his arms, that there were no more barriers, that only love remained.

It's Up to You When to Swing a Skittle or a Smile, Says Fay King

By FAY KING.

How to treat a husband is, after all, advice that no one can give.

What works like a charm in one case flops like a flapjack in another.

One wife can storm and rage and crack china over the head of an erring husband and make him like it.

The mildest lecture from another wife to a husband who undoubtedly deserves it gets her nothing but a door slammed in her face.

What will drive one husband to drink will bring another home with peace offerings.

One couple can fight like fury and make up again like honeymooners.

Another couple have a few harsh words, and things are never the same.

Intuition alone can tell whether to swing a skittle or just smile.

Madge Removes Bullets from Dicky's Revolver

My eyes mechanically followed Dicky's movements as he transferred his revolver from the hiding place he had thought safe from Junior, to his desk and locked the desk. But my brain was racing from one angle of my son's talk to another, trying to determine what he really did know of the gun and its hiding place.

"Children are so secretive," I said banally at last, while Dicky hurried into a lounge suit. All idea of showing him my plans for the basement playroom had vanished, dwarfed by the new problem.

"You think he may have known all the time?" Dicky said and his tone was truculent. "That would mean a capacity for deceit which the boy never has shown."

"I don't mean deceit," I said stoutly. "But he is so imaginative he might be making up a play about it the way he does with other things, and decide he ought not to tell what he knows until later."

"Yes, he probably will make a playwright or a circus press agent some day," his father returned. "Well, there's no use mulling it over any longer. Come on down and see how near Katie has breakfast ready."

I knew it was useless, but I made one more attempt at something experience warned me against.

"Dicky, after this, won't you unload that gun?" I asked.

His jaw set obstinately. I knew the sign, remembered too late the adjuration Lillian had given me long ago.

"In handling the Dicky-bird, old dear," she had said, "you would do well to remember the old story of the Irishman driving his rig to Dublin."

"Piggy go to Cork," he kept shouting loudly.

"A friend hearing, protested: "'But, Pat, you want to go to Dublin.'

"Whist!' Pat replied in a panic. 'Don't say that even in a whisper. The pigs thinks I want him to go to Cork so he's headed toward Dublin.'

Right well did my temperamental husband prove the truth of his old friend's characterization of him.

"No, I won't unload that gun," he said.

For an instant I saw red, was ready to spring at him and fight in primitive fashion for the chance to unload the revolver. Then long experience of him whispered that I must not inflame his obstinacy further. Perhaps I should be able to think of some way to persuade him to the course which I was sure he secretly approved, but was too foolishly proud to act on because of his own dictum against it.

Without a word I turned and went toward the door.

"Mad at me?" Dicky asked coaxingly, at my elbow.

"Not at you but at your obstinacy," I told him smiling. "But if you won't, you won't."

"You ought to know that by this time," he said with a sort of gloating over his own firmness which was more maddening than his former rudeness. "But please stop worrying. The key to the desk shall not leave my body unless I stop an automobile and somebody frisks my dead body."

"Don't!" I shuddered, and in the laugh which he gave my shivers he apparently put away all thought of the hidden revolver and Junior's possible knowledge of it, for he began to question me concerning my plans for the basement as if there had been nothing else on our minds.

I tried to summon the enthusiasm which had been mine over the project, but I could think of nothing save the writing desk in which Dicky had locked the revolver. All through breakfast I kept recalling the picture of his locking the desk and putting the key in his pocket. The thing became an obsession with me, and when the meal was ended, I knew what I was going to do.

"May I change my mind about that hunting expedition for William and Henry?" I put the question to Dicky at my first opportunity after breakfast to speak to him alone.

"That's your privilege," my husband retorted, looking at me with curiosity, nevertheless. "But I thought you wanted to postpone it until after Christmas."

"I did, but I've been thinking it over, and I believe I'd rather let them have one try at it beforehand."

"Get it out of their systems?" Dicky grinned.

"I'm not so optimistic as that." With an effort I smiled back at him. "But they may not be able to wait with comparative patience for a post Christmas expedition. Then I've promised to take Roderick and Junior for Christmas greens today with a picnic fire, and if the older boys come along——"

"They'll boss the job so thoroughly that the smaller kids will be nowhere," Dicky interrupted. "I get you, and I'll take them. Send them up to my room."

I waited feverishly until he had changed to his hunting clothes and had driven away with two wildly excited boys. Then, with a word to Katherine to keep Roderick and Junior with her, I went into Dicky's room, took the key of the writing desk from the pocket of the coat he had just discarded, opened the desk, lifted out the revolver and carefully unloaded it.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Man's Sweet Dream

A workless world! That is what Prof. Arthur S. Eddington predicts for us, in the not far-distant-future.

A world in which everything will be done by "sub-atomic energy." Just EVERYTHING—from running the vacuum cleaner to dusting off the piano, putting up the peaches, and washing the dog!

Think of THAT! Every day will be Fourth of July or Christmas or Sunday, with Father sitting around the house, talking about his dyspepsia or expounding his political views or toddling around the golf links, perfecting his profanity and keeping the dinner waiting.

Every day will be one long bridge party, one long petting party or one long whoopee party. Nothing to do 'till tomorrow—and nothing to do then!

It sounds like the Millenium—for the MEN. But, fancy a life in which you have a man lolling around the house all day for 365 days in the year! And a woman sitting around trying to think up something to do to kill time!

* * *

WILL this magic "sub-atomic energy" be such a boon to women, I wonder?

Will it get up the laundry and pick up the towels that Hubby flings so blythly on the bathroom floor?

Will it find a man's socks and inspire his shoes to do a fox-trot to the closet and hop onto the right shelf? Will it whistle for his hat and find his umbrella and get the spot off his coat-lapel?

Will it bathe the baby and get the goo off his hands and rock him to sleep?

Will it pull Willie's loose tooth and darn the holes in his stockings and tie up his sore finger, and wash behind his ears and make him take castor oil?

Will it argue with the butcher about the cuts of meat, and think up something new or something different to have for dinner on Monday? Will it clean out the refrigerator and feed the cat and take down the summer curtains and mix the salad-dressing, and re-cover the porch cushions and rush to put down the windows when it rains?

Can you call to it in the kitchen and say, "Subby! The waffles are burnt and the eggs were cooked a minute too long yesterday. And, don't forget that the Joneses are coming for dinner; so set the table for seven, and put on the monogrammed napkins."

Nope! For "Subby" or "Ally" or "Sub-atomic energy" is NOT a woman! And, when Prof. Eddington says that this will be "a workless world," he means that it will be a MAN'S world. And that man will loaf from sun to sun, but "woman's work" will never be done—unless she does it herself!

* * *

And wouldn't that be a SWEET DREAM, if it could ever come true?

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Are Babies a Good Bet? Do Babies Mar Connubial Bliss?

We said they were—the best bet on earth.

But Josephine disagrees indignantly—tells us that her baby wrecked her happiness.

And I suspect that quite a number of restless, discontented young wives are going to agree with her.

"Dear Sally Martin—

"You're column is the first thing I read, every day, and I usually like your advice fine, but I want to say that when you tell these young wives to 'snap out of it' and have babies, you're all wrong!

"How do I know? Well, I did just that. I have two of them. They are beautiful babies, and I love them better than anything in the world, except my husband.

"But at 26, I'm tied down so that I never go any farther than the corner store to do my shopping. The first year or so I was married, everything was lovely, and I was so happy. I was kept very strictly at home when I was young, and never allowed to go out much. I thought I was going to have a nice time when I was married. I thought Phil and I were going to be great pals . . . and go places and do things. And we did, till the first baby came. Then it was you know you can't go out, on account of Bobbie!'

"So here I am, having a swell time, staying home, week after week, day in and day out, looking at the automobiles passing the house, while my husband is out enjoying himself in our second-hand one.

RUBBY'S NIGHTS OUT

"He goes to the theater four times a month, and to a union meeting once a month. Before the babies came he never went out without me at all. And now, to make matters worse, he works nights, and even if we could afford to have someone come in to take care of the babies, we couldn't go out together. He sleeps till 1 o'clock in the afternoon, then he gets up and dolls all up and says, 'I'm leaving early.' What for? To meet some of the fellows he works with, and have a good time!

"Yes, he goes. But where do I come in? Nowhere! I'm just a baby nurse!

"Yes, I joined a club . . . and when I went to it I had to drag the kids along! One is 20 months, and the other four years old. A lot of fun I had! I don't belong to any now . . . or go anywhere. Phil goes fishing or hunting, and money for such trips never worries him. He borrows it, then pays so much back each week out of his salary. And if he gets an extra night off, there's always some picture playing downtown that he must see. And off he goes. If I go, I have to go alone, on Sunday nights, while he stays with the kids.

"So my sentiments are these. If you are ready to settle down and turn into a stick-in-the-mud, and don't care for shows or dances or living like a human being, then go ahead and have babies . . . but otherwise . . .

No! I am so fed up I could scream . . . and I love babies, too. But I'd like a little something besides babies in my life!

"JOSEPHINE."

You poor kid!

I know just how tired and hungry for fun you are! And how unfair Phil seems.

But you'll never get either fairness or fun by sitting down and feeling sorry for yourself and blaming it on the babies.

The babies aren't wrecking your life. Yours and Phil's muddled management has wrecked your life.

DRIFTED INTO TRAP

"You've drifted into the same dreary trap that snares so many young couples. And you drifted because you didn't plan for that trap.

Before you married you were full of plans. You had it all figured out how you were going to work, and how much you were going to save, and just what you would buy, didn't you, honey? You used all the sense you had, as well as all the love. You knew marriage wasn't 100 per cent easy, and so you anticipated every difficulty and avoided most of them. And because of that, you were happy—wonderfully happy.

Then the babies happened. And babies are big business. But you didn't realize they were big business. You didn't realize that you would have to readjust your lives in order to keep things smooth. You just thought that loving the babies and each other would be enough.

But it wasn't enough. Of course it wasn't enough. Love isn't enough to keep any big business going. You must have definite programs and plans—you mustn't just "expect"—the other fellow to "do the right thing." You must sit down and definitely divide the responsibility and face all the hardships together.

You didn't do that. You just trusted to luck. And as a consequence, Phil, being human, has left the babies up to you—and you, little sister, are in the well-known soup.

Now snap out of it! You and Phil are headed for tragedy, but you can still avoid it if you'll use sense. Phil has been thoughtless—because you've let him be thoughtless. Well, stop letting him, and act your age. Grown people have to safeguard their own happiness, and wives are no exception.

Sit down and have a frank talk with Phil. Show him this letter. Tell him where you're both heading. Ask him to help you. And, while you talk and ask, show him how you love him and need him. He'll be flattered pink at the thought that you're longing for the old sweetheart days again. I'll bet you my new green sport socks that he'll find a way to help you before you're a day older.

Am I right? How did you manage, when the babies were small, you other wives? Come on—give this discouraged kid a hand. We've all been through it—now let's tell her how.

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women who have normal, well-developed legs, arms and torso, and shoulders that are narrow, usually are inferior breathers. The chest is pretty much of our own making. Correct posture, holding the head regally, letting fresh air surge through all the channels of the lungs, will produce chest development. These habits add to the perfect lines of the silhouette.

Since the bob came in, women have ceased to believe that cutting makes the hair grow thicker. Foolish notion. If cutting acted as a tonic there wouldn't be any baldheaded men. Cutting does precisely nothing to the growth of the hair. Short hair has one advantage; it can be washed more thoroughly and more conveniently than long hair. That counts.

There is no such thing as bleaching the skin, changing the color. The reformation that transforms the yallery hide to peach-blow loveliness comes about through the application of dequamating fluids that fluff off the discolored cuticle and reveal the fresh young baby skin that is always forming underneath the old cells. Lemon juice does the work slowly. Peroxide is effective. A few drops of tincture of simple benzoins in the rinsing water when the face is bathed will encourage dark tones to go hence.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Outlook for Epileptic Is More Hopeful Today

Referring to the various troubles that man is heir to, the doctors speak of "functional" and "organic" diseases. An organic disease affects the structure of a particular organ, while a functional disease affects the action of an organ rather than its substance.

DR. COPELAND

Among the functional diseases is epilepsy. Between attacks the victim of the disease is as normal in appearance, in actions and in mental activity as any of his associates.

Epilepsy has been described as the "falling disease." The victim falls as if shot. The face is very pale and the eyes turn upward. The head is drawn to one side or backward. The hands are clenched with the thumb doubled under the fingers. The entire body becomes stiff.

Following this condition, there are convulsive movements of the body, face and limbs. The muscles twitch, the eyes roll, and there is frothing of the mouth. Unless carefully watched the tongue may be severely bitten.

Gradually the convulsion passes and the patient falls into a stupor.

On the other hand, the patient's trouble may be so slight as to escape notice. There may be simply a suspension of the particular act in which he is engaged at the time. He may hardly realize that something untoward has occurred.

The frequency of the attacks varies. They may appear daily or even more than once a day. On the other hand they may come on once or twice a month or only once a year.

There is no association of epilepsy and lack of mentality. When I was a boy in school the smartest pupil in my class was an epileptic. Many victims are more than ordinarily bright.

Epilepsy is one of the most discouraging of the nervous diseases to treat. But at the present time, when special attention is being given to diet, occupation and the improvement of nutrition and the elimination of the wastes of the body, the outlook is more hopeful.

There are many factors to be studied. Uncorrected eye-strain, nasal trouble and other forms of irritation seem to have a bearing on the attacks. Undoubtedly disturbance of the intestinal tract is productive of much trouble.

Every person who has the symptoms of epilepsy should be placed under the care of an expert.

Answers to Health Queries

E. Adams: Q.—What causes an itching rash which bothers me more at night? The flesh rises in red ridges and lumps on my body.

A.—You may be troubled with urticaria. A nervous condition, constipation, in some instances a kidney condition may be responsible for urticaria.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Succession of Family Names

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Here is my problem. It concerns the naming of a first son. Because of the age and health of my husband's father, he is desirous of naming his first son for him—and the second son for himself. Say the grandfather's name is John Paul Jones. Would it be correct to call the grandchild John Paul Jones, second—as the father's name is Henry Thomas Jones?

2. Also, would it then be correct to call the second son Henry Thomas Jones, Jr.?

I have received many conflicting answers to this question, and shall be very thankful, indeed, for your advice.

D. M. A.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.

Guest Towels

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When visiting friends or relatives for a few days, is it proper to take your own towels?

D. M. C.

No! This would be quite an insult to your hostess, such an insult that I fear she could never forgive you, unless she realized that you did not mean it in any way but the most thoughtful. Every hostess who has pride in her home has pride in her "guest towels," and she will wish that you, as her guest, shall also enjoy the beauty of these.

Donning One's Hat and Coat

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When a gentleman calls to take a young lady to a theater should she have her hat and coat on ready to go, or should she ask him in and then put on her hat and coat?

2. Should she bring her coat to him for him to help her in putting it on?

3. Is it proper for a young lady to take a young man's arm?

PATSY.

1. She asks him to come in first and then puts on her hat and coat.

2. She needn't be quite so "dependent" as this. Naturally, when she starts to put on her coat he will step forward to help her, if she is putting it on in the room in which he is.

CHECK VIRGINIA FOREST FIRES

RICHMOND, Va., July 14.—(AP)—Forest fires continued to rage on Brush Mountain although civilians and National Guardsmen who fought the flames believed they had won a gruelling battle to save homes of farmers at the base of the slope.

Ditches were dug and back-fires started to check the blaze, which spread rapidly through woodland parched by a sustained drought and threatened many farm houses and buildings, one barn was burned and flames approached close to many homes before they were checked by efforts of the fighters.

Two companies of National Guards from Blacksburg and Christiansburg and scores of citizens continued the fight as the wind swept the fire away from the farm homes in the vicinity.

National Guard officers visiting Blacksburg said the fire was partly under control, but would continue to burn for many days unless rain checked its sweep.

Residents in the vicinity reported that an explosion preceded the flames in one of the smaller buildings. Other buildings were ignited before firemen arrived.

OLD TORTURE CELL FOUND

CUENCA, Spain, July 14.—(AP)—About 200 skeletons, supposedly those of persons put to death in the sixteenth century, were viewed by thousands who visited a dungeon in the underground chambers of the old Santa Clara Seminary, where the bones were discovered.

Officials said the position of some of the skeletons indicated the victims had died in agony. Some of the bodies were mummified. Ropes had been tied about some of the necks and waists.

Evidently the victims were thrust into the dungeon through a hatch hole at the top. The dungeon was about 14 by 15 feet in size. A mirror, which distorted the appearance of the sufferers, was found inside.

The dungeon was discovered in the course of repairs to the seminary.

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—Alonzo W. Pond, leader of the Logan African expedition of Beloit College, and Mrs. Pond, returned on the President Roosevelt after spending three months in the Sahara Desert seeking evidence that Africa and not Asia was the earliest home of ancient man.

Mr. Pond said the expedition had discovered four ancient camp sites in the desert.

BERLIN, July 14.—(AP)—Will H. Hays arrived here from Paris, where he took part in a film conference that brought a settlement of patent and other rights disputed by German and American movie interests.

He declined to comment on the agreement reached. He said his purpose was to get a first hand knowledge of motion picture conditions in Germany, and to exchange views with some of those in Germany who are contributing so much to the development of the motion picture art.

FLORES AIDING PLOT EXPOSE

MEXICO CITY, July 14.—(AP)—Daniel Flores, who shot and wounded President Ortiz Rubio in the jaw on Inauguration Day, February 5, recently had an audience with the president and since has made important declarations to the authorities that probably will involve other persons in the attempted assassination.

This notice was communicated to the press, but District Judge Jose Caballero, in charge of the Flores case, refused to disclose the details of the declarations.

The young man has been held in the penitentiary since the shooting and is awaiting trial.

'Rogues Gallery' Of 'Quacks' Opened

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—The Health Department has established a "rogues gallery" of medical quackery, Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne announced.

It is a list of 25,000 manufacturers and peddlers of allegedly fake remedies and contains "word pictures" of quack doctors all over the United States. It took six months to complete and is said to be the first of its kind in any health department in the world.

It was originally advocated by Commissioner Wynne for use in an attempt to rid the radio field of questionable broadcasting on medical and similar matters.

WESTERN HEAT WAVE RBOKEN

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP)—Middle westerners rolled down their sleeves and resumed their coats today with the return of moderate weather after a week of intense heat.

A heavy canopy of clouds hovered over the north central states and showers splashed upon hard baked ground in many localities, pushing temperatures down from the vicinity of the century mark to the eighties, and, in more northerly districts, to the seventies.

The weather bureau forecast comparatively cool weather for the upper Middle West through the first part of the week.

Walter Huston Bad Man Opposite Del Rio In "The Dove"

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 14.—Failing to persuade Douglas Fairbanks to play the part, United Artists has signed Walter Huston for the Mexican bad man in "The Dove."

This part was taken by Noah Beery in the silent film in which Norma Talmadge and Gilbert Roland appeared several years ago.

Huston's role will be quite similar to "The Bad Man," made famous on the stage by Holbrook Blinn, which he has just completed at First National. It will add another colorful portrait to his gallery of screen characterizations. No Broadway actor has caught on in the talkies more emphatically than this middle-aged leading man. Though Hollywood in general hasn't seen D. W. Griffith's "Lincoln," the few who have declared that Huston's portrayal is one of the finest the screen has ever seen.

Dolores Del Rio

In "The Dove," the Broadway star will appear opposite Dolores Del Rio. No one has been selected as yet to play the young American gambler who was the romantic lead in the stage and silent film version. There is some talk of re-writing the talkie to allow Huston to win the girl at the fade-out.

Thornton Freeland, who's scarcely beyond his apprenticeship as a director, will be given this important assignment. Apparently, he must have done a good job on "Whoopee."

THE GORDIAN KNOT

Both Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were seeking George Grossmith, the English actor, for a part in a talkie. Though the two studios are associated, there was lively tugging on each side.

To cut the Gordian knot, in steps Gossmith and "they swear it's true," declares with English selflessness:

"Let's not argue about this gentlemen. I'll simply resign."

Since the film colony has taken to boating, a series of mishaps have been reported to this department. Neil Hamilton has made two rescues in as many Sundays. One was Buster Collier, who was stranded in a speedboat several miles at sea. The other was Joe Toplitsky, prominent local real estate man, whose cabin-cruiser balked off the Malibu Beach colony.

NEW FOG EFFECTS

A new method of photographing fog effects was successfully tried out at the Warner Brothers studio. In the past, the prop department had always squirted petroleum through a spray-gun. Desiring to get a close-up without getting moisture on the lens, the cameraman on "Outward Bound" placed two ordinary frosted globes on either side of his machine and shot the scene with this lighting alone. The effect was a perfect imitation of fog.

Robert Milton, who is directing this picture, has a novel method of addressing his actors. He calls them "my children." Incidentally, I saw him laboring with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., like he was a child. His precision exceeds that of any other director I have seen in Hollywood, save possibly that of Murnau.

MRS. REID'S VENTURE

Labeling 1930 as a bad year for independent producers, Mrs. Wallace Reid has bought an apartment house and is catering to film people. Her establishment has a swimming pool and a full gymnasium. She furnished the apartments to suit the tenants.

Mrs. Wallace Reid.

When Roscoe Arbuckle moved in, they carried up the lobby furniture. I mean this seriously. It was comfortable Monterey chairs and tables, and suited Roscoe's fancy exactly.

Though Mrs. Reid's film ventures haven't been widely publicised since her first anti-dope picture, she has been a consistant producer, and has made a good deal of money out of it. Her present retirement is only until the situation for independents improves.

TIFFANY TO ENLARGE

While most of the studios are moving out further from the center of Hollywood, Tiffany is preparing to buy a half block of land adjacent to its present plant. Phil Goldstone, head of the company, says that new stages will be built on the property. If Rex Lease continues on his obstreperous course, this department suggests an arena might be profitable. Two days ago reports had Nils Asther waiting on Rex's doorstep to avenge Vivian Duncan. Things haven't been so exciting since Jack Gilbert and Jim Tully were looking for each other.

Sergei M. Eisenstein, the Russian director, makes a practice of traveling about his native land, looking for types. He tells the story that, for one picture, he needed a blond, husky fellow who looked like an anarchist.

Hiring a cab, Eisenstein traveled all over the city, scanning the crowds. But it was to no avail. Finally, he returned to his home. As he got out, the cabman removed his fur cap. He was husky, blond, and the very type demanded. Furthermore, he got the job.

WHEELER AND WOOLSEY AND "THE CUCKOOS" IN HARRIS

"The Cuckoos," featuring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, which was reviewed in this department when it was shown in East Liberty several weeks ago, has come into the downtown district and is the photoplay attraction of the bill in the Harris, where it opened Saturday. It is a musical comedy, in which Woolsey is a fortune teller and Wheeler is his assistant. They fly back and forth between the United States and Mexico, encounter a group of Gypsies and have various adventures calling for comedy sequences by them, with others of the cast frequently breaking into song. Margaret Padula, as the Gypsy queen, is prominent as a vocalist.

June Clyde and Dorothy Lee are in the cast.

With Victor Graff as the master of ceremonies, Ralph Harrison's RKOians offer a musical stage feature with specialties.

TWO DEAD, FIVE HURT IN CRASH

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH
by WILLIAM PFARR

Earl Jacobs, the clerk in Common Pleas Court, was taking the roll call of jurors when a naturalized citizen who had been called for jury service stopped before him, bewildered.

"Juryman?" asked Mr. Jacobs.

"No," the visitor answered. "Polish."

Nicknames? Well, there's "Buckets" Sandomire, now a dignified lawyer but not so long ago an undignified, rough-and-tough forward for the Coffey Club basketball team. His correct name is Beryl, and when his pals in the uptown district heard Mrs. Sandomire calling for her Beryl to come home for dinner, they naturally twisted the appellation to Barrel. From Barrel it was just a step to Baskets, and from Baskets to Buckets, which for some unknown reason, stuck.

Jimmy Doyle, the white-haired foreman of the county cleaning department has two nicknames—"Sheeny" and "Dude." Many years ago, on the South Side, he went to work for the first time in a mill. Ignorant of the sartorial needs of the millman, he reported in a new straw hat and fancy oxford shoes. One glance was enough for the foreman to label him Dude.

"Pie" Traynor, of course, is so called because, as a boy in Somerville, Mass., he could never get enough of it. And Arthur Edmond Vosberg, the retired South Sider, doesn't know why he's called "Dutch." Horace McCullough, the police reporter, was branded "Sonny Boy" by Charlie Faulkner, the svelte police inspector, because McCullough, a tenor on the side, insisted on disturbing Faulkner's office with that classic air.

Jimmy O'Kane, the homicide detective, answers to "Bones" because for years he was the chauffeur for Dr. Sable, the city surgeon, who mends 'em. And "Pug 'Em" Sweeney, the Squirrel Hill detective, is so called because he used to "pug 'em" when he was younger and wilder.

Our favorite is the nickname of the Schenley caddy hailed as "Show-me-your leg." A few years ago, leaving No. 1 tee with a new customer, he would suddenly develop an ingenious limp.

"What's the matter?" the golfer would ask.

"Oh," the caddy would answer, "I've got to go to a hospital next week for an operation. Gotta make lots o' money this week. Wanna see my leg where it's hurt?"

And without waiting for the answer to this generous invitation, the caddy would display a permanent but minor scar along his limb. On one occasion his sad story won a $3 tip.

RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH, PRIESTS CELEBRATING MASS IN WEST PARK AS POLICE STOOD ON WATCH FOR COMMUNISTS

GUARD RESCUES TWO MEN IN RIVER

City Employe Plunges Into Allegheny to Save Pair As Steamer Tips Skiff

Forced to leap fully clothed into the middle of the Monongahela River near Tenth street when their little skiff was sucked under the side wheeler excursion boat Julia Belle, Peter Balalck, 18, of 2123 Watson street, and Peter Lesonick, 14, of 4 Brady street, floundered in the water until rescued by City Life Guard Benjamin F. Nowak, late yesterday.

Life Guard Nowak was on shore when he saw the boat nearing the skiff. He swam to the pair as they plunged into the river. He held up young Lesonick until the battered skiff was shot to the surface as the boat passed over it. After helping the two men into the boat, Nowak pushed the skiff ahead of him as he swam to shore.

Balabek and Lesonick had been given permission to use the skiff from river pool No. 10, where Nowak, a police pool life guard, was on duty. The heavy wind is blamed for blowing the skiff alongside the boat. Before the youths were aware of their danger, they were being drawn under the wheel. They leaped into the water as the skiff was struck and dragged under the huge wheel.

Nowak today was seemingly unaware of the heroic work he had performed, but was greatly concerned about getting a new skiff for his beach.

TRIO ARRESTED AT WEST PARK MEETING

Youths, Accused of Disturbing Worshipers at Outdoor Services, Fined $10 Each

Three youths were fined $10 each in North Side Police Court today, as a result, police say, of an attempt to break up outdoor religious services held by the Russian Orthodox Church in West Park yesterday, in observance of Russia day.

Those arraigned were Don Kowalski, of 1110 Bingham street; David Bankofle, of East North Diamond street, and A. W. Sabatini, of Springdale, Pa. Kowalski and Bankofle were arrested in West Park while, police testified, they were passing literature in the crowd attending the service. Sabatini, police charge, was arrested a short distance from the park, where he is said to have been passing literature to those en route to the services.

Police accused the youths with passing literature published under the name of District No. 5, Communist party. The placards bore "Down with Black Ravens!" and "Down with the Arcnbishop Platon!" as headings.

The youths had nothing to say at the hearings.

Yesterday's services were held while scores of patrolmen and detectives patrolled the park. Archbishop Platon, of New York, assisted by 35 priests of the Pittsburgh district, conducted the services.

A large choir sang Russian compositions during the services, which were attended by several hundred persons.

ROAD IS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Indications that the state Route No. 330, Section 6, the new Saw Mill Run road extension or the old Clairton road will be completed in time for a November 1 opening is indicated in the report of the contractor that he is ahead of his schedule of 170 working days.

The report shows that practically all the grading has been done and that nearly all of the walls and bridges are finished. It is estimated that pouring of concrete will begin July 21. The road will be 40 feet wide in Overbrook and 30 feet in Brentwood and will materially reduce the running time to the downtown, Pittsburgh district.

LACK OF FOOD CAUSES DEATH

Starvation is given as the cause of death of an aged man found unconscious in West Park, North Side. At the hospital and county morgue it was said that the victim's name is John Wallace, 55, address unknown.

Police found Wallace Saturday afternoon in a clump of bushes in the park. He was very weak and was in a serious condition. He died in the Presbyterian Hospital yesterday morning. John Black, superintendent of the county morgue stated that death was caused from starvation.

Police Seek Woman In Blair Stabbing

SHOT BY MATE, FAILS TO RALLY

No improvement was noted today in the condition of Mrs. Mary Davidson, 40, of House 117, Mollenauer, Bethel Township, who is in Mercy Hospital with five bullet wounds in her body, inflicted, police said, by her estranged husband, Edward, 48, in the front yard of their home Saturday night.

Davidson, a coal miner, then turned the gun on himself, and died en route to St. Joseph's Hospital, according to police. Failure of Davidson to effect a reconciliation prompted the shooting, detectives believe. Several months ago Davidson was arrested for breaking his wife's arm with a baseball bat, it was said.

BUTLER PIKE COLLISON FATAL

Man Dies in Hospital From Injuries Suffered Last Month; Motorist Held

The toll of a triple automobile crash on the Butler Plank road, between Witmer and Undercliffe, today stood at two dead and five injured.

The accident, which occurred on a curve yesterday afternoon, claimed the lives of Mrs. Margaret Ward, 50, of Vowinckel, Clarion County, and Mrs. Agnes Groves, 64, a widow, of 5248 Harrison street. They were pronounced dead soon after being admitted to hospitals.

Those injured in the crash, according to the coroner's report, are Thomas Ward, 50, husband of Mrs. Ward, in Allegheny General Hospital; John Lackovic, 10, of Wildwood; Chris Eck, 20, of Cadogan, Pa., and Nicholas Nickles, 18, of Cadogan, in St. Margaret's Hospital, and Michael Bria, of 210 Tenth street, Sharpsburg, whose head injuries required 14 stitches.

TWO WOMEN KILLED

The women, passengers in Ward's machine, were killed when his car collided with a car driven by Eck, in which Lakovic and Nickles were riding. The collision forced Bria's automobile over to the side of the road.

Injuries suffered June 27, when struck by an automobile caused the death in Mercy Hospital of Josph Fuch, 44, of 432 Anthony street. The car, morgue attaches said, was driven by Edward Richeson, of 660 Shade avenue, Bellevue. Richeson was ordered to appear before the coroner today.

Three men were injured, two seriously, when an automobile collided with a street car at Second avenue and Maurice street, late last night. They were Charles Scott, 39, of 628 Griffin street, and Lee Colburn, 26, of 208 East Ohio street, passengers in the automobile, which was driven by Scott; and Dennis Sullivan, 35, of 1515 North Franklin street, North Side, a passenger on the street car. All were taken to Mercy Hospital, where it was said Colburn and Sullivan were suffering from probable fractures of the skull.

FLEEING DRIVER SOUGHT

State highway patrolmen today instituted a search for a hit-and-run motorist who fled after his automobile collided head-on with a motorcycle ridden by Wensel Thomas, 25, of Aliquippa, near the victim's home yesterday. Thomas' skull was fractured and he was instantly killed. The fleeing car bore Ohio license plates.

A victim of a hit-and-run driver, the body of Metro Palicchak, 49, farmer of Big Beaver Township, Beaver County, was found along the Koppel-New Galilee road with the head crushed.

Doris Urenico, 4, of Dravosburg, sustained a fracture of the leg when struck by an automobile driven, police said, by George Zavosic, of Maple avenue, Clairton. In Miller avenue, Clairton. She was taken to McKeesport Hospital. Zavosic was arrested on a reckless driving charge and released under bond.

THREE YOUTHS HURT

They were John Vaglia, 21, of Wilkinsburg; Lawrence Stein, 18, of 8210 Fahnestock street, Brushton, and Harry Lintleman, 15, of Tokio street. Vaglia suffered concussion of the brain and a crushed chest. Stein and Lintleman were only slightly injured. All were taken to Columbia Hospital.

Frank Newton, 40, of 1735 Laketon road, Wilkinsburg, was slightly injured early today when he was run down by an automobile at Penn and Trenton avenues, Wilkinsburg. E. O'Donnell, of Fayette County, driver of the car, was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

Shower Abruptly Halts Film Shows in Parks

Thousands of men, women and children gathered in six city parks last night to witness the initial showing of films, sponsored by Mayor Kline and the City Council, scurried for shelter when a sudden downpour of rain fell about 10:30 o'clock.

The majority of the people were drenched. They were sitting in the open enjoying the pictures when the clouds opened and sent down a heavy shower. Before they could find cover most of the spectators, estimated af close to 100,000, had undergone a thorough soaking.

Films that had not run their full course were suddenly terminated and as the shower slackened, the bedraggled crowd departed.

The sudden scurry from the different parks caused congestion of auto traffic and travel in the streets leading from the parks was tied up.

The shows started at 9:30 p. m. in Schenley, Highland, McKinley, Washington, East and Arsenal parks. Long before dark the parks were crowded, despite the threatening clouds.

The programs this year are being supported by an appropriation by City Council. When inaugurated last summer by Mayor Charles H. Kline they were given through individual contributions, operators and other employes donating their services.

Lynch, Ex-City Fireman, Still Heeds Duty Call

LIGONIER, Pa., July 14.—William R. Lynch, retired Pittsburgh fireman who lives on a farm near here, still retains his fire-fighting instinct.

From his dwelling, three miles away, Lynch saw the flames from a burning shack set on fire by the East Boroughs Council, Boy Scouts, early yesterday for fire drill purposes, near their camp at New Florence.

Hastily dressing, Lynch and his wife dashed to the scene in their automobile, thinking a blaze of consequence was raging. They sped over an abandoned roadway and reached the scene in a few minutes.

There they found the Scouts, who had formed a bucket brigade, quenching the blaze which lighted up the mountain side. George Rankin and Paul Moore, Wilkinsburg bankers, were looking on.

Lynch took charge of the Scouts and gave them instructions as to the most approved methods of extinguishing a fire.

As a member of No. 16 Engine Company, he answered an alarm for a fire in his own home, at 7129 Willard street, February 29, 1928, to find that his two young sons, Bobbie and Jackie, were dead from suffocation in their attic playroom.

Will Rogers Says:

Santa Monica, Cal., July 14.

Atlanta no more than gets cleaned up from one Bobby Jones celebration till another comes along. You can easily exist in Atlanta by eating only at Jones' testimonial dinners. If all Jones' banquet speakers were laid end to end it would make a fairway with a 287 par. So find a spot on Stone Mountain for Bobby. Had he lived in the days of Jeff Davis, Stonewall Jackson and Robert E. Lee, he would have done to Grant and Sheridan what he did to Hagen, Diegel and Sarazen.

And just think, 10 years ago all Atlanta had was coca cola. Yours,

WILL.

SCREENDOM'S BEST-DRESSED AS RATED BY THEIR MODISTE

GLORIA SWANSON
Hollywood's modiste says she's studied elegance's very last word.

CLAIRE WINDSOR

GRETA GARBO
In private life, she dress simply. It's true.

The Hollywood modiste who says all these things about film stars.

NORMA SHEARER
Miss Shearer, who Miss Dimmitt says is the ultra-sophisticated type. Wouldn't you know it?

FILM CITY BOWS TO BILLIE DOVE

"Billie Dove is the best-dressed woman in Hollywood."

That is the opinion of Miss Viola Dimmitt, noted Hollywood dress designer and manufacturer. Of Miss Dove's attire she says:

"Her gowns are always striking and sophisticated."

Miss Dimmitt rates Claire Windsor as the second-best dresser, and she admires Gloria Swanson's choice of garments, too. She declares:

"Gloria Swanson, on the screen or in private life, is the last word in studied elegance.

"Janet Gaynor, on the other hand, wears sweet and fluffy clothes that emphasize her wistful appeal. So does Mary Pickford. Norma Shearer is the ultra-sophisticated type.

"Boyish, sporty clothes suit Joan Crawford's personality. Greta Garbo despises the slinky, clinging gowns she wears so beautifully in her pictures."

Miss Dimmitt says the beautiful film stars don't approve of dainty step-ins and filmy teddies because they would make wrinkles beneath their form-fitting dresses.

PAPER USED FOR MODELING

By PENELOPE REDD

Only the last decade has found those engaged in sculpture experimenting in new materials for sculpture. The modernists were the innovators in brass. Their emancipation from marble and bronze was quickly emulated. Presently one was likely to find figures in coal, silver, copper wire, soap, or any material that was malleable.

Nancy Thompson, of Pittsburgh, who had always been interested in modeling, participated in the prevailing plastic freedom. She has used papers as a base for light, graceful figures that may be painted.

They lend themselves particularly well to souvenir portraiture. Thus, Miss Thompson has done a number of such portraits for wedding parties where bridesmaids have triumphantly carried away their miniature replicas.

It suggests itself as a kind of portraiture that would be adaptable for studies of children. It does not exceed the limitations of its slight medium by ambitions to rival graver forms.

Miss Thompson has been working on a Hopi Indian group placed in a typical southwestern background of pueblos and desert. Her archaeological conscience, which demands accuracy, does not deter her from rendering her figures with easy realism.

Nancy Thompson might easily prepare an exhibition of her figures which would almost inevitably receive popular acclaim.

Miss Dimmitt, noted Hollywood dress designer who knows all the secrets of the film colony, tells frankly that film stars just can't wear the filmy underwear dear to the average woman. It wrinkles their clothes for the screen.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: When a man and woman have separated and the woman is taking care of the children, should she not receive as much as half the man's income as alimony?

* * *

JUDGE R. A. KENNEDY, County Court, Aspinwall—The husband who is the earning power and the source of income for the family should be allowed enough to keep himself or he will become discouraged if held down too closely, and complete failure will result.

Judge Kennedy

MISS ELEANOR ARBUTHNOT, school teacher, Dormont—Yes, I think she should receive that much alimony. Raising children isn't the easiest job in the world, and the woman who is carrying the full responsibility of that job certainly deserves enough money to do it well.

Miss Arbuthnot

C. E. MARLOFF, clerk in Desertion and Non-Support branch, County Court, Glenshaw—The law doesn't allow a woman more than a third of the man's income in a case like that, but it is reasonable that she receive more when caring for children. If she has no children, then a half of his income is too much.

C. E. Marloff

MISS HELEN SIMPSON, Homewood—I certainly think the woman should receive half the man's income. It's the only fair division when she has to care for children as well as keep herself.

Miss Simpson

X. L. PASTORIUS, mail carrier, Allentown—There are a lot of different angles from which you could judge that question, but I think if the separation is the fault of the man then the woman should get half his income. If it's the fault of the woman then she could get far less than that.

X. L. Pastorius

MRS. MONA COX, housewife, Pittsburgh—Yes, she should by all means receive half his income because she is left with all the responsibility of the children and the problem of taking care of herself.

TRAFFIC STUDY MADE TO HALT ACCIDENTS

Duggan, McIntyre to Share Bench With Magistrate; Watch New Street Signals

A series of visits to Traffic Court by members of the Better Traffic Committee has been arranged between Magistrate W. P. Soost and Traffic Committee Chairman Frank L. Duggan to bring about a better understanding between the two organizations. Duggan and City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre will sit on the bench with Soost in court tomorrow to observe the problems which come into the court each day.

Traffic engineers this morning will be watching the working of the third unit of the city's traffic control system which has been put into effect in the Shadyside district. This includes lights on Baum boulevard between Melwood street and Negley avenue, lights on Morewood avenue, and on Center avenue, all being controlled from a central station at Morewood and Center.

LARGEST IN COUNTRY

The other units of the city's systems are the East Liberty and downtown units. The downtown system, Mr. McIntyre said, includes lights at 77 intersections and is the largest progressive signal system in the country.

Fifteen adults died through automobile accidents last month, 13 of them pedestrians, according to an analysis of the June records of the Bureau of Traffic Planning. No children were killed, the first June free of juvenile fatalities, this record bringing a decided reduction in child traffic fatalities for the first half of 1930.

FEWER CHILD VICTIMS

The total child fatalities for the first half of this year are considerably lower than for the similar period last year, it was pointed out. Eleven children have been killed so far this year. For the same period of 1929, 19 were fatally hurt.

Burgess Carl Dittmer of Ingram announced that all motorists arrested for disobeying the 26 new "through traffic stop" signs in the borough would be turned over to a magistrate and fined. Last week several persons were arraigned for the violations. The order of Burgess Dittmer was to go into effect today. Since the signs were erected two weeks ago 46 persons were arrested, but no fines or jail sentences imposed.

BABE FALLS IN WELL, SAVED

Three-year-old William Conrad, of 1327 Island avenue, North Side, owes his life today to the bravery of a 14-year-old cousin, Robert Blair, of the same address, and to the perseverance of six members of the West Newton fire department.

William was removed unconscious from a 40-foot well yesterday by young Blair and several men, and after more than an hour's work was revived by the firemen with inhalators.

The two boys were taken by Mr. and Mrs. Conrad to West Newton yesterday to visit an aunt, Mrs. A. J. Johnson, of 411 Fifth street.

They were playing in the Johnson back yard when William disappeared. He was discovered in the well, under five feet of water.

A rope was tied around Robert and he was lowered 40 feet into the well. Robert reached him and held his head above water while William Weisgerber, a neighbor, was lowered on another rope. Weisgerber brought the boys to the top of the well, where they were helped to safety.

Fire Chief George C. Rohland, Fireman Otto Graff and John W. McCauley, a funeral director, hurried to the Johnson home with an inhalator.

CHILD'S CRIES HEARD BY RESCUER

Brothers of Periled Pair Reach Shore; Victim's Body Carried Under Boat

Jimmy Barry, 9, was dead today because he waded out into the Monongahela River further than any of his playmates.

Jimmy was drowned late yesterday when he waded beyond his depth. One of his companions, Christina Zizis, 7, of 1223 Webster avenue, was rescued by Earl Butler, of 1415 Webster avenue.

William, 11, a brother of the dead boy, and Christina's brother, James, 9, were in the stream at the foot of Wood street when Jimmy called for them to follow him. Christina followed and sank. Her cries brought Butler to her aid. The other two hurriedly made for shore. Christina was taken to the Allegheny General Hospital and revived.

The current whirled the Barry boy under the hull of the packet General Wood, where it was recovered. For two hours physicians at the South Side Hospital worked in a futile attempt to revive him.

DESTROYS TAG, PAYS AUTO FINE

"Feeling tough" is no reason for destroying a traffic tag, Milton Copeland, of 5913 Nicholson street, learned today.

He was fined $10 on a disorderly conduct charge by Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Station after Patrolman Frank Stone had testified that Copeland had thrown away a tag placed on his car, parked in a restricted area in Wilkins avenue, near Whitman street.

Before Magistrate Papale today, Copeland's excuse was:

"I felt tough. Things had been going bad all day."

One was held for court, 11 were given fines ranging from $5 to $25, and 30 were held for a further hearing. Informations were ordered drawn against two offenders who failed to appear for hearing.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Leaving for Resorts

Have you ever noticed that society people usually return again and again to a resort that proves especially attractive to them? And this sunny month of July seems to be causing a great many people to vanish from the city to resorts and the beach and cottages and congregate in colonies at their favorite spot. And now though July is nearly half over there are still many people left to go who are planning to leave later this month or even in August. Today I know of quite a few July travelers.

5 Times Married, Woman Seeking 'Perfect Mate'

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—With a background of three husbands and five marriages, Eugenie Bankhead Hoyt Butt Lee has very definite ideas about men.

They cause heart-breaks; they are cruel; they are kind; they are inconsiderate more often than not, but—

"A woman in love has no conscience or judgment," she said today.

"And what is more, she oughtn't to have!

"For love is more powerful than reason, say what you will to the contrary.

"Some people have said that I am merely aiming at a long series of marriages and divorces like a certain blonde who now holds whatever matrimonial records there are.

"But it is not so. I am really nothing more than a feminine Diogenes, seeking the perfect man—the perfect husband.

"Marriage is holy. The bonds of matrimony cannot be sniffed at or laughed by.

"But we can all make mistakes. And I am sure the lawmakers never intended us to suffer an entire lifelong curse of unhappiness at home because of such a mistake."

'Happy' Spirit Message Accepted as Genuine By Lady Doyle

LONDON, July 14.—(AP.)—The widow of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was heartened today by what she accepted as a spirit message from her husband, who died last week.

A medium, Mrs. Estelle Roberts, claimed to have received the message after a public memorial service at Albert Hall had ended with 50 or more of the audience of 10,000 walking out in protest at five alleged spirit messages from other persons long dead and gone.

The medium walked across the platform to Lady Doyle and said:

"I have a message from Sir Arthur. Sir Arthur told me that one of you went into the hut (a building on the Doyle estate at Windlesham, Sussex, where he was buried Friday) this morning. Is that correct?"

Lady Doyle answered:

"Why yes, I did."

The medium then continued:

"The message is this: 'Tell Mary—!'"

At this point the pealing of the pipe organ drowned out her words.

Lady Doyle declined to say what the remainder of the message was, merely explaining:

"I can't. It's precious and sacred. I am perfectly convinced that the message is from my husband. I am sure of that and I am sure that he has been here with us as I am sure that I am speaking to you. It is a happy message, one that is cheering and encouraging."

Mary is the name of Sir Arthur's eldest daughter, by his first marriage.

FLAGLER WIDOW DIES IN ASYLUM

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ida A. Flagler, wealthy divorced wife of the late Henry M. Flagler, a founder of the Standard Oil Company, was buried yesterday in Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn. Her death, which occurred on Saturday in a sanitorium to which she had been confined for the last 30 years, had been kept secret. She possessed a fortune estimated at $12,000,000.

Mrs. Flagler was divorced by her husband in 1901 on the ground that she was "incurably insane." At that time he established a $1,000,000 trust fund for her, which mounted rapidly from her Standard Oil holdings.

Her principal heirs are said to be two nephews and a grandniece, George W. and William W. Taylor, and Ruth E. Taylor, of Pasco, Wash.

Mrs. Flagler was 82. She was the daughter of an Episcopalian minister and was married to Mr. Flagler in 1883.

Watchman Battles With 20 Policemen

NEWARK, N. J., July 14.—(INS.)—It took 20 policemen and detectives, three tear gas bombs and a riot gun to convince a newly employed and bewildered watchman today that it was the arm of the law, and not the clutching fingers of the underworld, that demanded admittance to the construction company yard he guarded.

Two of the policemen were wounded. The watchman, Amilo Spagnuolia, 56, was arrested after the fight and charged with assault and battery.

THE WOOLEN SPORTS SUIT CONTINUES AS A FAVORITE

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 14.—You really must hand it to the simple little suit of tweed or jersey tweed. In a season replete with luxurious and ultra feminine clothes, the little suit is seen in the best places and worn there by the smartest women. These suits, devoid of any ornamentation and refreshingly informal have the irresistible quality of youthfulness and therein of course is to be found their principal appeal and charm. Such a suit must of necessity be perfectly cut and tailored for simplicity permits no mediocrity. If you are buying a suit, we think that such a model, especially if you spend much time out of doors will be more useful than the more classical tailored model. Accessories should of course be strictly in keeping with the smart informality of such a costume, with an absence of so-called sports jewelry, which even in the wool and metal creations favored this season sometimes take on an over elaborate form.

AN IDEAL SUIT of the "little" classification is to be found in the Jane Regny model shown. This couturiere has had an enormous success with suits of this type and has become an arbiter of sports clothes. The model depicted here is of jersey tweed in a yellow and green mixture with a short collarless jacket and straight skirt. Both jacket and skirt are simply trimmed with stitched on piecings. The shoulder yoke topping the sleeves is smart and very new. A tucked crepe blouse in Chinese yellow with a rounding flat collar is worn with the suit.

THE SEASON of printed chiffon evening gowns is with us again, and even those women who make up their minds to forswear this fashion, have succumbed and are ordering their floral chiffons. Maggy Rouff made the model shown which is of varying shades of green and gray on a yellow ground. Two large flowers made of the material are placed at one side of the narrow belt. A soft falling cascade of the fabric forms a jabot at the left side of the decolletage in back, the decolletage, incidentally being V shaped in back and square in front. The upper part of the skirt is laid in sloping folds which, when half way down, open and fall into circular godets which are slightly shorter at the front than at the sides or back.

Hot, Dry Spell Rids Kentucky Of 'Skeeters'

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 14.—(AP.)—Though Kentucky is experiencing its worst drouth in years, and has just emerged from an almost unprecedented heat wave with temperatures above the century mark, incorrigible optimists point to one benefit of the hot, dry spell—mosquitoes are scarce.

These pests require moist ground in which to breed, and moist ground is at a premium in the Blue Grass state at present. Rivers are at their lowest stages, creeks have dried up except for comparatively few stagnant pools, and marshes are things of the past.

SAY 'LINDY' WON FOR MORROW

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(INS.)—It was the popularity of "Lindy and Anne" that gave Dwight W. Morrow his overwhelming victory in the New Jersey senatorial primary, rather than the popularity of the anti-dry cause for which Morrow stood—at least, that is, according to the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

In a statement "warning" the Republican party against nominating Ambassador Morrow for the Presidency in 1932, the board said:

"If he is nominated, the probability is that he will suffer overwhelming defeat, a prophecy that is reasonably safe in spite of his heavy victory in the wet state of New Jersey.

"There is more than a little reason to suspect that half of those constituting his majority were, in fact, voting for Lindy, and the other half for Anne."

The statement asserted further that in 1928, the South put principle above party in breaking away from Alfred E. Smith, and predicted if the Republicans nominate Morrow, the Republicans of the North will demonstrate the same thing.

PUNCH ALONE NOT ENOUGH IN MAJORS

WHILE IT MAY be argued that base hits cover a multitude of [illegible] sins, they won't carry a player all the way in the major leagues. Hitting power alone is not sufficient to enable him to get by, and there is a limit to the distance he can go without having something else to back up that quality. The old wallop is a mighty asset, there's no denying that, but unless a pastimer possesses some defensive ability as well he has no business in the big show. He simply doesn't belong, and it's only a question of time until he is pronounced unfit and is shipped back to the thickets.

Wilbert Robinson

In view of this old rule, fans around the National League circuit will await with considerable interest the outcome of Wilbert Robinson's latest experiment with a player who has appeared to come under that classification in the past. The athlete in question is Outfielder Ike Boone, who went to the Brooklyn team last week from the Mission club, of the Pacific Coast League. Robbie has finally succeeded in making a fielder of the once erratic Babe Herman, but whether he can do the same with Boone remains to be seen.

IKE HAS STARTED out flashily with the Robins in the hitting department, but that occasions no surprise. There never was any doubt that he packed a big punch. He always could hit them a mile against every kind of pitching and if that were the only requirement in the majors he would have remained a fixture in the select set after he first came up.

But as a fielder Boone was "terrible." Both the Yankees and the White Sox dropped him hurriedly on that account after short trials. Then the Red Sox took a chance with him, but he wasn't good enough even for them, though they have finished in last place every year since 1922, with the single exception of 1924, when they rose to the dizzy heights of the seventh notch.

THE RED SOX used Boone through a full season in 1925 and his shortcomings on the defensive are attested by the fact that they discarded him at the end of the campaign despite his success in making 157 hits in 133 games for the highly respectable average of .330.

Ever since that time, Ike has remained buried in the bushes. In spite of his known walloping talents nobody in the upper loops wanted him. All because he couldn't field. His strength on the attack was more than offset by his weakness on the defensive.

Smead Jolley

AND IF BOONE has not improved, you will read eventually that he is again on the road back to the brush belt. Sockers must be able to do something besides ride the well-known Wineap. Players who are not good hitters — such as Hughey Critz, Freddie Maguire, Leo Durocher and others of that type—may stick in the majors because they are remarkable fielders, but the slugger who can't field is a different proposition. He doesn't last. DeWitt LeBourveau is a notable example. His big batting average brings him up almost every year, but he always goes back again.

LEFTY O'DOUL failed a couple of times for that reason after he gave up pitching for outfielding. Babe Herman played with 12 different clubs in 10 different leagues in seven years, including two major league failures with the Tigers and Red Sox. Smead Jolley and George Fisher are likely to pass out from the same cause. Jay Kirke, Bunny Brief, Shag Horan and Carl East are only a few of the other similar cases of the past, not to mention Ham Hyatt, who never could win a regular place in the Pirate lineup.

That's the tradition standing in the way of Boone's success with the Robins unless he has improved greatly as a fielder. It all goes to show that the widely advertised slugger from the minors can't get very far in the majors unless he has something else to recommend him. The difference between the number of runs he knocks in for his own side and the number he gives the enemy through being hit on the head by fly balls is too great to warrant his retention.

ONE OF THE new football guides for 1930 contains what is represented to be a photograph of the Notre Dame team of 1929. You might easily overlook the fact that Knute Rockne is missing, for sometimes coaches do not pose with their teams, and besides, Rockne was ill last fall.

But a second glance fails to reveal Jack Elder. Looking again, you can't find Frank Carideo. Neither is John Cannon among those present. Nor is there any sign of such other fairly capable players as Tim Moynihan, John Law, Marty Brill, Tom Conley, Moon Mullins, Twomey, Colrick or Leahy. With these trifling exceptions, it's a splendid likeness of the team.

Knute Rockne

BUT THE GUIDE doesn't stop there. Some further startling information about the Notre Dame stars of last year is to be found in the portion of the book that is devoted to a record of the principal scoring plays made by college elevens during the season of 1929. Here is set forth that Wallace Snow, of the Broadus team, made a 10-yard forward pass to a teammate, Burner Stewart, and that the latter ran 12 yards for a touchdown against Notre Dame. A very neat play, admittedly, and worthy of special mention if it had ever been made, but there is one little obstacle in the way of its being accepted as a reality, and that is that Broadus never played a football game with any part of a Notre Dame team.

THE HUGE GAINS in wealth and color that have been made by some of the big turf fixtures now attracting wide attention each year have put some of the outstanding racing numbers of the old days in almost total eclipse. Annual races that once were blue-ribbon events have fallen to the level of the commonplace.

There is the Brooklyn Handicap, for instance. When it was run this year only an average half-holiday crowd was at the track, and the outside world gave it little notice. Yet there was a time when it was one of the biggest and most colorful features on the American turf calendar.

INAUGURATED AT THE old Gravesend track in 1887, the Brooklyn Handicap grew into an annual standout that brought together the greatest horses and the leading jockeys of the country. The capture of it was considered one of the highest achievements possible in the

Leonard Aids Singer; Mandell Works Hard

DELAWARE WATER GAP, Pa., July 14.—(AP)—Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight champion, came to Al Singer's camp yesterday to show the Bronx youth a trick or two for use in his battle with Sammy Mandell for the 135-pound crown at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Leonard worked for three-quarters of an hour with Singer this morning and the challenger showed such speed and pep in seven rounds of sparring with his partners that he was ordered to take a rest today.

ORANGEBURG, July 14.—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, preparing here for his lightweight title defense against Al Singer on Thursday, boxed six fast rounds yesterday before a crowd of 500, the largest number that yet has seen him work out. The champion sparred two rounds each with Bobby Ridon, Negro lightweight, Vincent Valenti and Charley Goodman.

DUDLEY SECOND BY SINGLE STROKE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

George Underwood, of the Alcoma Country Club, who qualified for the national open championship but did not take advantage of his opportunity to battle in the field with Bobby Jones last week, was leading the field in the Pennsylvania open championship at the Allegheny Country Club shortly afternoon today when he returned a 72 two more than par.

Second in line was the defending champion, Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., who needed 73.

Ned McKenna, Oakmont's assistant pro, went in to third place tied with George Chapple, of the Steubenville Country Club. They had 75s. Fred Baronti, of Stanton Heights, former West Penn open champ, carded 76.

GOES OUT IN 33

In taking the lead with his brilliant 72, a fine score for Allegheny today, Underwood played masterful golf to trip the first nine holes in two under par for a 33. He did not have more than a 4 on the trek, scoring no less than three 3's and the other holes in 4. Coming in it was a different story, however, and he ran up a 39 with four 5s, but nothing worse.

Dudley almost duplicated Underwood's outgoing play, a 5 on the fourth hole making the one-stroke difference in their total for that nine—but at that the defending champion was one under par. Likewise the easterner fell considerably on the tough spots on the second nine and needed 39 to come home.

J. Bernd Rose, of Allegheny, president of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, was all of 88 for his first attempt in the championship.

Greer McIlvain, of Oakmont, who copped the Pennsylvania amateur gonfalon here last week, was far over his title-winning game of last week, coming in with 78.

ELDRED CARDS 75.

Vincent Eldred, of Highland, and Andry Velican, of Green County Country Club, Waynesburg, both of whom qualified and played in the national open, found the going tough. Eldred needed 75, with two 6s, one on the ninth and another on the eighteenth. Velican was away off with 38-43—81.

Tommy Armour, of Tam O'Shanter, Detroit, former national open champion, who had entered the tourney, did not arrive on the scene of action this morning.

A'S TAKE LEAD IN AMERICAN

Associated Press.

The Cincinnati Reds have developed quite a punch at home but it is strangely lacking when they take the road.

Last week they looked like a team of world beaters at Redland Field taking four straight games from Chicago. They still looked good as they picked on the humble Phillies for three more victories, but yesterday when they moved to New York, they lost, 9 to 5.

The Cubs moved to Boston yesterday and lost two games to the Braves, 2 to 1 and 3 to 0. The first Boston victory was due to Harry Seibold's pitching, the second to the Massachusetts law which makes it necessary to stop Sunday games promptly at 6 o'clock.

The Philadelphia Athletics once again forged to the top of the American League standing by pounding out a 12-to-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns while Detroit beat Washington, 5 to 4. These results placed the Athletics a full game in the lead.

The next two places remained in their former status as the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians won easy victories. The Yankees, although outhit 14-11, did their scoring early and had only to check a Chicago rally that netted three runs in the ninth to defeat the White Sox, 7 to 5.

Cleveland held fourth place, six games behind, by pounding on Jack Russell for five runs in the opening game and piling up an 11-to-3 score against Boston before rain halted the game in the seventh inning.

NIGHT GAME AT WHEELING

WHEELING, W. Va., July 14.—Bill Gumbert, Charleroi pitching ace, will oppose Joe Jachym, Wheeling submarine hurler, in the first night baseball game ever played in this section of the country tonight at Stogie Park, Fulton. The pitching selections were made by Manager Bob Prysock, of the Smokes, and Manager Dave Lamb, of the Charleroi Governors late last night.

The umpires will be Jacobs and Gallagher, and the game is officially scheduled to begin at 8:30.

Preceding the game will be the usual ceremonies, in which Honus Wagner, one-time shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates, will toss the first ball to Jim Hanley, who years ago managed the Erie club. Jack Glasscock will be the backstop, H. E. McConkey will call either ball or strike on the first pitch.

Sometime during the game President Elmer M. Daily, of the Middle Atlantic League, and Honus Wagner, as well as other prominent baseball men, will make a short talk over the microphone which will be installed in the park today.

In yesterday's Mid-Atlantic League tilting, the Jeannette Jays nosed out the Cumberland Colts, 8 to 7, at Cumberland; Johnstown was beaten by Scottdale, 8 to 3, at Johnstown; Fairmont defeated Clarksburg, 4 to 3, at Clarksburg, and the Charleroi Governors were bumped by Wheeling, 5 to 4, here.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Hard losers, yet good sports in their cooler and contemplative moments, the countless fans of the Flatbush today were singing the praises of Larry French, the 22-year-old Pirate southpaw who yesterday challenged the league leaders and then floored them via the shutout route. Naturally the Brooklyn rooters were loud in their acclaim of Jumbo Jim Elliott, who finished on the crying end of a 1-to-0 masterpiece with French. But Big Jim had the moral support of 20,000 onlookers while the young Buccaneer had to carry on before a hostile throng.

Maybe the Pirates will have to face Dazzy Vance this afternoon, but they'll be ready. Uncle Robbie has Ray Moss, Ray Phelps and the Dazzler in shape to fling. Either Glenn Spencer or Heine Meine will work for the Pirates.

L. WANER PRAISED

While all the rest of his players were acclaiming French yesterday, the analytical mind of Manager Jewel Ens saw another angle that had a bearing on the victory.

Ens, however, did not have anything but ringing praise for French. Jewel regards Larry as one of the most courageous pitchers the Pirates have had in many years and he lauds him openly. Yet there was another eventuality in the slab classic of yesterday that bears out an argument which the pilot has brought out on many occasions.

Ens contends that the Pirates have lost at least 10 games on account of the absence of Lloyd Waner. The ailing star was in yesterday's game long enough to knock off the run or runs that might have spelled defeat for the Bucco. If it is true that 10 of the Pittsburgh reverses would have been victories were Brother Lloyd at his post, a glance at the standings will show that the Pirates today would be practically tied with the Robins for first place.

FANS IN UPROAR

Take it or leave it, Brother Lloyd appears to have saved yesterday's gem when he threw a strike from center field to third base which broke up a very dangerous looking rally. Had the play missed fire, the Robins would have had runners on third and first with none out and the well-known Babe Herman at the bat.

Nick Altrock Says:

DETROIT, July 14.— After looking over the Phillies you wonder what good are base hits. The Phils have been clubbing the equine's epidermis all over the premises, and look what they got for their pains. They are down so low in the standing that the National League had to put in a subcellar to hold them. For the first time since cuckoo clocks have been ticking off time, a last-place team is leading the league in hitting. The only way I can figure it out is that the Phillies represent Camden, N. J. When they are in the field, a guy that was waiting for the Phils to cop the pennant would win the flagpole-sitting championship.

PUBLIC PARKS NET PLAY GETS UNDER WAY

SUN TELEGRAPH EVENT DRAWS FIELD OF 169

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships, long looked forward to by eager municipal courts racqueters, will crash into action on the rectangles of Schenley, Highland, Olympia, Frick West and Riverview Parks this afternoon and evening. With a dozen golden medallions awaiting individual park victors, as many more of silver slated to go to runners-up, and trips to the national public parks championships at Washington, D. C., and legs on the handsome new Sun-Telegraph men's and women's singles challenge trophies promised survivors of the inter-park elimination series, 169 contenders for city honors stand primed for the fray.

MOORE PLEASED

Never before in the half-dozen years' history of parks tennis tourney play in Pittsburgh has enthusiasm for the contesting run so high. For weeks entries have poured in to the desk of the tournament editor, for a fortnight or more reports have come in of intensive practice on municipal lots for the coming battles, for the past few days, wires have been hot with last-minute inquiries and attempts to break into the milling even after the official closing of the entry lists. All of which indicates that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the co-operation of the Pittsburgh Bureau of Parks and the Pittsburgh Tennis Association, has struck a responsive chord in re-establishing on newer, larger and better organized scale the public net event that had been, most unfortunately, permitted to lapse several years ago due to lack of proper backing and consequent inability to send winners to the national titular meeting.

Superintendent of Parks James Moore has expressed deep gratification at the success which the Public Parks tourney has achieved even in advance of its actual opening.

"The Bureau of Park is strongly in favor of any activity calculated to make Pittsburghers take advantage of their splendid park system," declared Superintendent Moore on Saturday when apprised of the remarkable interest in the municipal affair as demonstrated by the fact that it has drawn the greatest number of contestants ever gathered for a tennis conclave in this district. "We have been solidly behind the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's junior golf tournament since it was started two or three years ago and we are just as solidly behind this very praiseworthy attempt to give to our municipal tennis courts the same prominence that the municipal golf course enjoys."

PLAY UNDER WAY

As to details of the jousting today, there will be first round men's match in all parks from 2 p. m. onward. Younger players and others not bound by ties of labor are requested to communicate with their opponents and arrange to run off their tussles early in the day. This courtesy will leave the courts during the evening hours to those less favored racqueters who must spend mornings and afternoons at office or plant. As the field narrows later in the week, individual matches will be carded for stated periods by the committee. Meanwhile all entrants must report to the committeemen in charge and take turn on the rectangles as they are vacated upon completion of prior engagements. There will be women's play in Schenley Park this afternoon and all afternoons hereafter until the finale is reached. In the other parks, however, because of comparatively light enrollment in the ladies' division, feminine performers will not be called upon to meet in combat till tomorrow or Wednesday.

And just as last reminder—let no aspirant forget the necessity of displaying a Pittsburgh Parks tennis permit properly issued before beginning his or her initial fracas. Without this — default! Arrange to arrive as early as possible and do not leave without consulting the committeeman. If you have played, post your scores and set a time for your next tilt. If you have been victorious in the previous one. The following committeemen are in absolute charge in their respective parks:

Irving Goodman, Schenley; James F. Olko, Highland; William Creighton, Olympia; Andrew Smeaton, Frick; Austin Famariss, Riverview, and Ralph Beilstein, West.

McCAHILL ELATED

The sentiment of Superintendent Moore was echoed by David T. McCahill, prominent Steel City sportsman, donor of the famous McCahill Cup, symbolic of the Western Pennsylvania men's singles championship, and local representative of the Public Parks Tennis Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Said McCahill in the course of conversation with the writer:

"This word of the remarkable entry list in the Public Parks championships is the best tennis news I have heard this year. It is wonderful work and shows just what can be done when a real effort is made to accomplish something in the tennis line here. I am sure that I express the sentiment of the Public Parks Tennis Committee of the U. S. L. T. A. when I declare that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph is worthy of highest commendation for having undertaken the tremendous task of staging this event in six parks and of awarding in fitting manner the men and women—or perhaps boys and girls—who will come through to the various final matches.

"In bringing the splendid sport of competitive tennis to the park player who enjoys all too few opportunities to enter tournaments and learn the keen delight and gain the valuable experience of organized competition, an achievement of lasting worth is being recorded. I only hope—and I shall certainly do all in my power to make this hope a reality—that the Public Parks tournament in its actual playing will more than live up to the promise that it has given in amassing this amazing entry list, and that from this year onward, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Public Parks championships will be an annual tennis feature that shall ever occupy a more important position on our tournament calendar."

Congo Kid vs. Harry Sherman, 6 rounds, Freeport, L. I.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

One of these days, Willie Davies, Charleroi's great little fistman, will enter a ring to do battle and will not see glaring at him from the opposite corner the clouded features of one Black Bill, Cuban Negro, whom he opposes for the sixth time in the Meyers Bowl arena in North Braddock tonight.

A lot of water has gone over the fabled dam since the pair first met, some years ago, in Philadelphia, with Davies winning the decision. This bout led to two 12-rounders in Havana, Cuba, both of which were ruled draws. Followed then a hiatus in the relations until the alleged luck of the draw brought them together in the flyweight eliminations in New York, and Willie experienced one of his few off nights and dropped the "duke," thereby encountering his usual ill fortune in such tournaments.

FIFTH BOUT RECALLED

Some weeks ago the Charleroi mite wiped out the memory of that setback in a fifth duel, in the same ring in which he squares off tonight, but he had to fight an uphill battle to win, and some of the fans came away under the impression that Bill had coasted after accumulating an early lead and were dissatisfied with the result. Another rematch was a logical move, and so, like other argumentative subjects, the Davies-Black Bill match is with us again.

This writer cannot agree with those onlookers who thought Bill slowed down of his own accord in that fifth bout. True, he stormed about and attacked with vigor in the early rounds, but he had no lack of incentive to carry on. In fact, the handlers in his corner kept everlastingly after him, verbally lashing him right down to the finish and prodding him on to greater effort. Bill tried to respond, but he found Davies' boxing wizardry, represented by speed afoot, a nimble brain and a great left hand, too much to break down, and well before the finish realized he was a beaten gladiator.

MAKES UPHILL FIGHT

Davies, trained fine, was slow to get going, and, in the first three rounds, he found the ropes playing him false. These cords were new and lacked a certain elastic quality that is expected of them. Willie likes to play the ropes, falling back into them and rebounding into new attacking position. With no "give" to the strands, he was falling into them a dead weight and finding himself trapped there, an easy victim for the rushing, swinging attack of his opponent. Once he realized his predicament, Willie remained in the center of the ring and circled about and kept Bill off balance with his left and thereafter had the bout well in hand. He ought to repeat tonight if Black Bill has no more than he showed in their other battle here.

Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., and Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, middleweights, box in the eight-round semi-final tonight. Cowboy De Luca, of Lawrenceville, and Theodore Perez, Mexican, also middleweights, are in the second bout, and Jackie Wilson, of Homewood, and Jackie Ward, of Cleveland, are in the opener.

GIZZY AT JOHNSTOWN

Battling Gizzy and Mickey Duris box a 10-round return bout at Johnstown tonight.

The Meyers Bowl's plans for the next month are gradually taking shape. Jackie Rodgers will be one of the principals in the main bout next Monday night, his opponent not yet having been signed. The following Monday, it is planned to show George Parka, Homestead heavyweight, in the top spot, his first main bout appearance in the Bowl, where he made his professional start around here, and, on August 4, Buck McTiernan will be back, following his clean-cut victory over Farmer Joe Cooper there last Monday night.

Jack Wilson, North Side middleweight, and Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, are preparing for their third battle, to be fought at Hickey Park, Millvale, Thursday night.

CIRCUIT MEET OPENS

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 14.—(AP.)—Twenty-one events are on the program of a five-day grand circuit meeting which opens here this afternoon. The feature race is the American Pacing Derby for $25,000, which will be run tomorrow afternoon. The Exchange Club Purse of $10,000 will be decided Wednesday. Thirty-one entries are listed for the derby.

Ruth Warns Against Trying To Make One-Handed Plays

BABE
WHEN A SACRIFICE OR SQUEEZE PLAY IS EXPECTED THIRD BASEMAN SHOULD PLAY WELL IN READY TO POUNCE ON BALL. NOTICE HOW FAR IN FRONT OF THIRD BASE MAC IS PLAYING.

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

Mac was a pretty good kid ball player, but he always liked to pull one-hand catches when he could just as well use both hands. A number of times I warned him about this.

"Say, isn't a fellow ever supposed to make a one-hand play?" he demanded.

"Sure," I told him. "There's one spot on a ball field where a one-hand play is essential."

"Where's that?" Mac immediately asked.

"At third base," I told him, and explained just what I meant. "Whenever you're looking for a sacrifice or a squeeze play, the third baseman should play well in to the edge of the grass ready to pounce on that ball," I said.

The picture illustrates the position in relation to the base.

ONLY ONE EXCEPTION

I went on to tell Mac other things about the play.

"The minute the ball is hit down the base line, the baseman darts in," I told him, "and, if the play is close at all, he should field the ball with his right hand, making the throw to first base with the same motion with which he picks up the ball. It isn't an easy thing to do. The third baseman has to practice that particular play all the time. Even after the ball is fielded making the throw is tough for nine times out of 10 the thrower is off balance and must throw without pausing to balance himself."

"Isn't there any time when the third baseman doesn't handle a bunt down the third base line?" Mac inquired.

"Oh, sure," I replied. "Suppose there are men on first and second and the hitter attempts to sacrifice. In that case, the pitcher darts across to field the ball the minute he has made the pitch. The third baseman covers his bag. If there is time, the pitcher makes the play to third for the force play there, and, if not, he makes it to first base."

WHY THEY CALL IT THE "HOT CORNER"

"Why do they call third base the hot corner?" Mac inquired.

"Because ground balls hit down toward third base usually travel a mile a minute," I told him. "Then, too, the third baseman normally plays closer to the hitter than any other infielder, and the ball is on him so fast when it is hard hit that he hasn't a chance to move around like the other infielders."

"What are the first requirements for a good third baseman?" Mac asked.

"Sure hands, a good arm and the ability to throw from any position and throw accurately," I told him.

Mac laughed.

"What about that one-hand stuff?" he inquired.

"Well," I replied, "if a third baseman can do all the other things he won't have any trouble learning the one-hand play when it's needed."

END DOG-RACING MEETS HERE TONIGHT

Dog-racing in the Pittsburgh district will wind up tonight, at least for the present.

On the heels of the closing of the New Kensington track last Saturday night, announcement was made today that Bridgeville will close its spring meeting with tonight's program and District Attorney Andrew T. Park later announced that he would serve notice on the Oquanota Kennel Club, operating in Aspinwall to make tonight's bill its last, because of ministerial objections.

MAY RETURN IN FALL

Both New Kensington and Bridgeville are looking forward to staging meetings in the fall.

The Bridgeville track planned to run for two more weeks beginning today but changed its mind and announced today that it would turn over its plant and the adjoining parking grounds tomorrow to the committee arranging for a carnival to be held next week under the auspices of the Bridgeville Volunteer Fire Department.

ALLOON WINS DERBY

The Washington Cup race, a derby event, features the closing night at Bridgeville tonight. The New Kensington Derby, the feature of the closing program at the Westmoreland County track Saturday night, was witnessed by a crowd of 8,000 and won by Alloon, the favorite with Spindle Top second and Keno Thought third.

The longest shot of the night at the three tracks Saturday was Little Jim, which paid $18.40 at Bridgeville.

40-FOOT PUTT CLINCHES OPEN TITLE

Bobby Jones wound up his fight to retain his National Open crown over the Interlachen course on Saturday with this 40-foot putt on the home green. It gave him a birdie 3 and a score of 287, two strokes ahead of MacDonald Smith, the pro, who was the runner-up.

rier. And few pitchers would get out of a jam like that unscathed.

The intense struggle had reached the stretch-inning period and the Bucos had just carved out a run which they were guarding with much caution and valor. Frederick heard the pleas of the frenzied throng and when he hit a grounder straight to Charley Engle he ran so fast he beat the play for what looked like an important hit.

The fans shook with the noisy racket when Mickey Finn singled sharply to center. And here was the crux of the battle and here the ball-hawk tendencies of the younger Waner came to the center of the picture. Brother Lloyd is not the best thrower in the league, but he owns unerring accuracy in making quick shots to second and third—here he is a marvel.

CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY

It wasn't the throw altogether that marked the ace qualities in the sick lad on this play. Lloyd was playing rather close and as soon as the ball left the bat he charged in. He took the ball on the first hop as Frederick rounded second. Lloyd let fly with his "strike" and Pie Traynor actually had to wait for Frederick to reach the bag. The fleet lead-off batter was out by the proverbial mile and what looked like a winning rally was snuffed out. Encouraged by this championship play, French followed through with some championship pitching. And Ens' case appears to have been proved.

"I don't care whether he hits or not," said Ens with feeling after the game. "When he's in the line-up you will see that ball back on the infield in a hurry and that doesn't happen when he's out of there."

Adam Comorosky contributed a feature throw in the fourth that had a distinctive bearing on the contest. Glenn Wright led off with a single and Eddie Moore walked. Commy raced into left center for Gilbert's fly and when Wright tried to reach third after the catch, Commy and Pie nipped the former Pirates.

SUPPORT GOOD

Although Elliott outpitched Larry in the matter of hits, the latter rates making only four to the Robins' nine, however, there was a certain flavor to the pitching of French that could not be denied and he received fine support in the clinches.

Charley Engle, who has a yen for timely hits, produced the single in the seventh that led to victory, but Charley had to have a fine hit-and-run safety off the bat of Rolly Hemsley to gain the goal. Rolly hit into right with Engle on the run and Charley reached third. He scored from that point on Paul Waner's out.

Johnny Frederick doubled to right center with one out in the ninth. The excitement was high as Finn flied out. Up came Herm and the din was terrific. French made the slugger hit a fly to Comorosky to bring the game to a close.

BOUTS ADDED TO CARD

Bouts between Johnny Bafia, of Homewood, and Cyrus Clemens, of Jeannette, and between Young Zeno, of the North Side, and Johnny Trusky, of Braddock, have been added to the amateur boxing card at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. outdoor arena tomorrow night.

TOURNEY OPENS

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—Forty women golfers started play today in the Western Women's open tournament at Acacia Country Club here.

Sport Vignettes

The national open golf tournament just completed proved the law of averages, if nothing else . . . . The Joneses and the Smiths had it . . . . You can learn from any city directory or telephone book that there are more Smiths and Joneses than any other clan, with the Browns possibly next . . . . And here Bobby Jones wins again and the Smiths, MacDonald and Horton, are second and third . . . . If the latter pair only had whiskers and their first names were Trade and Mark—but, go, ahead, finish it yourself . . . . Vainly do we search the lists for a Brown to carry out the point . . . . The Arlington classic on Saturday simply was a rerun of the Kentucky Derby, with Gallant Fox, Gallant Knight and Ned O. running one-two-three . . . . It used to be that only a bad penny kept showing up, but in the life of Willie Davies it's a Black Bill . . . . They meet for the sixth time tonight in the Meyers Bowl ring . . . . With the Pirates in the East for a spell, we now can concentrate on the revival of bicycle-racing in these parts . . . . Remember the thrilling old classics of the wheelmen in the days before automobiles? . . . . Pro golfers don't have nightmares. But they do see the smiling face of Bobby Jones in their sleep . . . . Our idea of a plunger is a fellow who parlayed Bobby Jones and Gallant Fox for a $2 bet over the week-end . . . . Don't forget, in these not-the-heat-but-the-humidity days, that the football season is just around the corner, with practice sessions due to get under way in about six weeks . . . . Jim Long, whose popular sports comment column graces these pages daily, is off on a two weeks' vacation today, having left for parts unknown where he won't even see a newspaper unless he wants to . . . . It will mark the resumption of a fine old feud when Tony Canzoneri and Benny Bass clash in a return bout at the Phillies Park in Philadelphia one week from tonight . . . . They first met in Madison Square Garden, New York, more than two years ago, with both claiming the world featherweight title . . . . Bass was recognized as the titleholder in Pennsylvania, his home state, while Canzoneri was similarly regarded in New York . . . . Their battle was arranged to clear up the situation . . . . Bass was knocked down in the third round and came up with a broken collar bone, but grittily fought on to the finish of the fifteenth round, when he saw Canzoneri announced as the winner and "new champion" . . . . Shortly afterward, Canzoneri was laid low by illness, and, when he returned to action, he dropped the crown to Andre Routis, the Frenchman, in a big upset of the dope . . . . Routis did not reign long, being beaten by Battling Battalino, the present titleholder . . . . Meanwhile, Bass continued to strive for a championship and finally became the junior-lightweight king when he knocked out Ted Morgan in the second round of a bout that was as sensational as it was short. Benny himself helped on the floor in the opening round . . . . No title will be at stake when Bass and Canzoneri meet a second time, but a great battle is anticipated.—HARRY KECK.

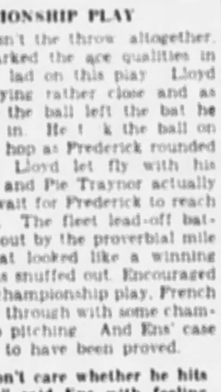
racing world, and the winners included such famous horses as Hornpipe, Banastar, Kinley Mack, Irish Lad, The Picket, Delhi and Tokalon.

Theatrical men even put a show on the road bearing the title of "The Brooklyn Handicap" and featuring Jack McAuliffe then lightweight flatic champion of the world. But it's all changed. Even the famous floral horseshoe that once adorned the winning horse and its jockey has gone. The far richer Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, the Belmont, the Futurity, the American Derby, the American Classic and other events have stolen the Brooklyn's thunder. It's merely a $10,000 handicap now, just another horse race.



Helene Madison

FOR REMARKABLE versatility and consistent excellence under a wide variety of conditions, Miss Helene Madison, the 17-year-old swimming marvel, has made a record not surpassed by rival champions in any of the other sports branches. In swimming, as in footracing, a sprinter is supposed to be a sprinter and nothing more. And a distance swimmer is supposed to shine only over the long routes and to be a total loss in the sprints. But the Seattle girl has shown the rare combination of being a world beater in both, for in the recent National A. A. U. women's championship meet on the Pacific Coast she smashed world records all the way from 100 meters to a mile. The new marks she contributed were 1 minute 8.2 seconds for 100 meters; 6 minutes 39.4 seconds for the quarter mile; 11 minutes 41.2 seconds for the half mile, and 24 minutes 34.2 seconds for the mile. It wasn't the number of records she broke so much as the great difference in distances that made her achievements amazing. A greater all-around champion has never been known in the women's division of any sport.

Has Downswing In Prices Run Its Course?

—By B. C. FORBES—

JULY has brought more improvement in sentiment than in actual developments in industry, agriculture, trade, finance. There are not wanting, however, symptoms that foundations are being laid for nearby betterment.

The first notable change may be witnessed in the security market.

HURRY calls for small lots of goods to be shipped by express are increasing. This may mean that inventories are abnormally low rath than that there has been any substantial increase in consumer demand. It may mean that inventories are abnormally low rather than that there has been any substantial increase in consumer demand. It may mean both. Even slender straws showing a tendency to blow in the right direction are welcomed these days.

AGRICULTURAL conditions, by and large, continue disappointing. Neither big-scale buying by the Federal Farm Board nor its urgent advice to reduce acreage has had the hoped-for effect. Wheat last week again dipped to new low prices since the war and closed the week nearly 40 cents below one year ago. Corn closed with a small net gain for the week; it is 15 cents under last year's figures at this time. Oats sank to a new minimum for the year; so did several important commodities, including rubber, silk, coffee, copper, tin.

Cotton also made a new bottom. It went below 13 cents in New York for all 1930 deliveries, while spot touched 12½ cents in Galveston, only a fraction more in New Orleans and even broke 12 cents in Memphis.

OIL PRICES were again cut at certain points and on the Pacific Coast savage warfare was waged by gasoline distributors, fantastically low prices being occasionally named. Whenever cut-throat competition degenerates into fanaticism, the end necessarily is near. A truce is now reported. Even so, the oil industry may continue to experience price-cutting troubles for some time in view of the facilities for enormous overproduction.

Copper was another major industry which experienced a fall in prices. Domestic sales were made at 11½ cents, and the export charge was lowered to 11.80 cents.

The steel industry is also off somewhat, both in unfilled orders and in uncertain prices.

SECOND-QUARTER reports naturally will make uninspiring reading. Contrasted with the record-breaking achievements of the first half of last year, few statements will show anything but declines more or less severe. It is at least a negative consolation to reflect that third-quarter comparisons will look better because the recession set in about the middle of last year. And, of course, the final quarter of 1929 was the poorest of the year.

That many dividends will have to be lowered is obvious.

That there will come to the surface other unfavorable acts and figures is a foregone conclusion.

NEVERTHELESS, sentiment has begun to improve a little, both in the business and the financial world. From not a few concerns this column has lately received statements showing some recent gains. Whether the turning-point has yet been reached cannot be definitely gauged. It is not illogical to reason that the down-swing in the general price level has gone quite far enough for the present and that we may shortly see at least mild recovery in various directions.

WHEN the government can raise money for 1⅛ per cent. when daily loans in Wall Street go as low as 1½ per cent and term funds are available under 3 per cent, you have in operation an extraordinarily potent business and security market tonic. Complaints have come from the rest of the country that it has been almost impossible to borrow funds at normal rates. Ground for such complaints should diminish. The leaven of abnormally cheap money in the financial metropolis cannot fail to spread gradually throughout the continent. For example, one more Federal reserve bank (Atlanta) lowered its rate last week.

It cannot be said that the superabundance of money has yet appreciably stimulated the security markets. The bond market is still only so-so. Stock quotations are only slightly better than they were at the beginning of the month.

BUT IT IS very significant that when stock prices are forced down by bears, activity now ceases. Whenever an upward trend sets in, dealings increase. This indicates that the market has been sold to a standstill.

The writer still looks for distinctly higher prices for good stocks before the year ends. Should general business record substantial recovery, then we might witness fireworks.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

1930 Corporate Financing Very Large

The new capital flotations of corporate securities in the United States during the first five months of 1930 are compared with the corresponding figures of the past nine years. Compilations exclude Government, State and Municipal securities, and farm loan issues. Investment trust and refunding flotations are omitted also because they do not represent new capital increases. Source: The Commercial & Financial Chronicle.

The value of the new bonds, notes and stocks issued by corporations during the first five months of 1930 exceeds greatly all other years, except 1929, which it closely approaches. Business must be in an optimistic frame of mind when it plans the extensive development that is indicated by such record-breaking financing.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 14.—Dull trading marked the opening of a new week's activity in the listed bond market, and the sluggishness of price movement was in marked contrast with the strength displayed last week. It was tinged with some irregularity, but best grade issues were steady to firm for the most part.

STOCK MARKET MAKES FAIR PROGRESS

Efforts to Bid Up Prices Hampered Some by Profit-Taking—Tone Strong

NEW YORK, July 14 (AP.)—Professional operators appeared to be buying more seriously, with the idea of anticipating the expected autumn upturn in business by taking a bull position in stocks today, giving the two weeks in the market a character in sharp contrast to the dull Monday of the week ago.

Efforts to bid prices were hampered by profit taking by cautious traders who bought around the bottom of the recent decline but a good deal was absorbed in good time as the market as a whole made steady progress. The business and financial reports of the week-end provided few if any definite clues to the business trend, but last week's fact-finding trips left a generally favorable position, apparently, and dividend and quarterly reports were quite satisfactory.

ADVICES BULLISH

Commission house advices were more bullish today for many weeks, but they are inclined to be hedged with qualifications. A few well known bull operators were said definitely to be in for a fresh campaign. One large statistical service advised customers that while further drastic declines from here seem unlikely the situation did not justify rushing for stocks on advances.

Traders are now inclined to look for guidance to the continuously markets and renewed bullishness seems to be predicated on the theory that commodities are at last scraping bottom. Wheat began the week firmly which was encouraging.

Business news was fairly satisfactory. American Tobacco reported first half earnings of $5.71 a share, against $4.15 on a smaller capitalization. It for same period of last year. Great Atlantic and Pacific reported a gain in June sales of more than 8 per cent over June, 1929. Week-end trade analyses indicate abnormally low retail stocks, good collections and the beginnings of inquiry for fall goods at wholesale.

CREDIT PLENTIFUL

The new week began with credit again plentiful which was reassuring, indicating that Friday's ease was not merely in reflection of the placing of funds for the week end. Call loans renewed at 2½, but later the rate was reduced to 2.

Among the high priced and more volatile issues Case Columbian Carbon, American Tobacco, Allied Chemical, Worthington Pump and Atchison gained 4 to 8 points or more. Active pool favorites appeared to be Radio, Keith and Vanadium which rose about 3 and 4 points and board room gossip linked rather hectic trading in these issues to two prominent operators.

Shares gaining 2 to 3 points included North American, Al Reduction, Union Pacific, Best, United Aircraft, Eastman, duPont, Gillette and Byers. Such stocks as U. S. Steel, American Telephone and General Electric sold up only moderately.

Monongahela Seeks Bond Issue Permit

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP.)—The Monongahela Railroad asked permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission today to issue $10,000,000 in 4½ per cent bonds. The Baltimore and Ohio, Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and Pennsylvania, which own the Monongahela jointly, will guarantee payment of the interest and principal of the new issue.

Freight Ton Miles Drop 12.6% in May

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP.)—Freight traffic for May on class 1 railroads aggregated 36,576,433,000 net ton miles, a reduction of 12.6 per cent as compared with May, 1929. The figures were compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics, maintained here by the carriers.

Report on Trade Delayed by Tariff

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Due to enactment of the new tariff law, the mid-monthly foreign trade report of the Department of Commerce will be delayed from 7 to 10 days.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 14.—Although the curb market was all the busier to step ahead today private maintained the upward trend that developed late last week. There were minor and brief intervals of profit-taking but the recessions proved to be mostly inconsequential for the list displayed marked resistance even at or about Saturday's closing levels.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange giving all stocks and bonds traded in, unless the number of shares or amount of bonds is not known:

HOW CUBA WILL MEET TARIFF EXPLAINED

Island Republic Expects To Thrive Despite Levy On Sugar, Machado Says

By MERRYLE STANLEY

Universal Service

NEW YORK, July 14 — Gen. Gerardo Machado Y Morales, president of Cuba in an exclusive interview sets forth the new economic program by which the island republic expects to thrive in spite of the increased American tariff on sugar, it was announced.

Gen. Machado, who has been described as a benefactor of the Caribbean, declares that Cuba is too small to be self-sufficient economically, but elsewhere that it must make certain adjustments which it plans to attribute will those of large countries rejoicing the United States. On a recent visit to Havana, subsequent to the Cuban presidential campaign, an array of prominent Americans aboard Cuba's private yachts, including business degrees. The conversations which [illegible] to make [illegible] prosperity [illegible] of the investment of [illegible] $1,500,000,000 of American [illegible] as in Cuban sugar [illegible] of plantations, banks, public utilities and railways. Gen. Machado's revealing answers [illegible] a state paper of extraordinary [illegible] interest.

Friends of the President [illegible] nize that he will be judged favorably only by [illegible] accomplishments, such as road building and improvement [illegible] the economic technique [illegible] than by abstract human values. [illegible] there has in fact been a curtailment rather than an extension of civil liberties during the five years of the Machado administration. A dictator presiding [illegible] prosperity, and Gen. Machado who has spent most of his own career in business is confronted with a major business depression. What he purposes to do to alleviate the situation for the sugar growers, the business men, the laborers is set forth in the Cuban's answers to my questions.

ECONOMIC IMMATURITY

Gen. Machado believes that Cuba's troubles are traceable to economic immaturity, to a lack of diversification of economic activities and also to [illegible] foreign exploitation of the opportunities on the island. Referring to Cuba's dependence on foreign capital chiefly from the United States, the President said:

"That which at the beginning was an essential factor of our rapid development, has in the course of time turned to be one of the direct causes of the present situation, because interest accrues on capital and immigrants usually send their savings to their native country, and these factors have caused an invisible exportation of wealth, which is the more serious in our case, because it is fed not only by those productive currents, but also by the income of numerous properties, the owners of which abandoned the country by virtue of the political transformation, and by the benefits of essential industries that are not owned by Cubans, except in an insignificant and exceptional degree, such as banking, railroad transportation, maritime facilities, insurance and fuel."

Giving the other side of the picture which has cramped Cuba's economic life Gen. Machado, who recently announced far reaching governmental economies, including a reduction of his own presidential salary from $25,000 to $12,000 a year, pointed out:

"The other cause of the present economic disturbance we must find in the peculiarities of our production and, consequently, of our commerce. Cuba possesses exceptional conditions to produce sugar in great quantities and as a consequence is in a privileged situation for the manufacture of alcohol. Also as regards tobacco, in which our product is beyond competition. Cuba constitutes the sole source of supply for the coveted leaf of supreme quality. It was, therefore, not strange that Cuba should direct her activities towards sugar and tobacco when the hour arrived to reconstruct her wealth and to strengthen by economic independence its political liberty.

SELECTIVE PRODUCTION

"It is natural and most logical that each country produce for its own and for the universal consumption, preferably those commodities which they can supply with advantage, uniting the highest quality with the lowest cost."

Obviously, Havana cannot dictate tariff legislation to Washington or the other famous world capitals. Asked how Cuba expected to modify its economic life to prepare itself for survival in a highly protected world, Gen. Machado alluded to the new economic program, saying:

"Only the energy of our people, supported by the marvelous geographical situation of Cuba, could have resisted the pressure of factors of so much strength upon our economy, and the degree of advancement that in spite of that has been obtained, is truly admirable; but I do not ignore the fact that conditions each day are more adverse and that it is necessary that we defend ourselves, if we want to subsist, adopting the measures that circumstances may require."

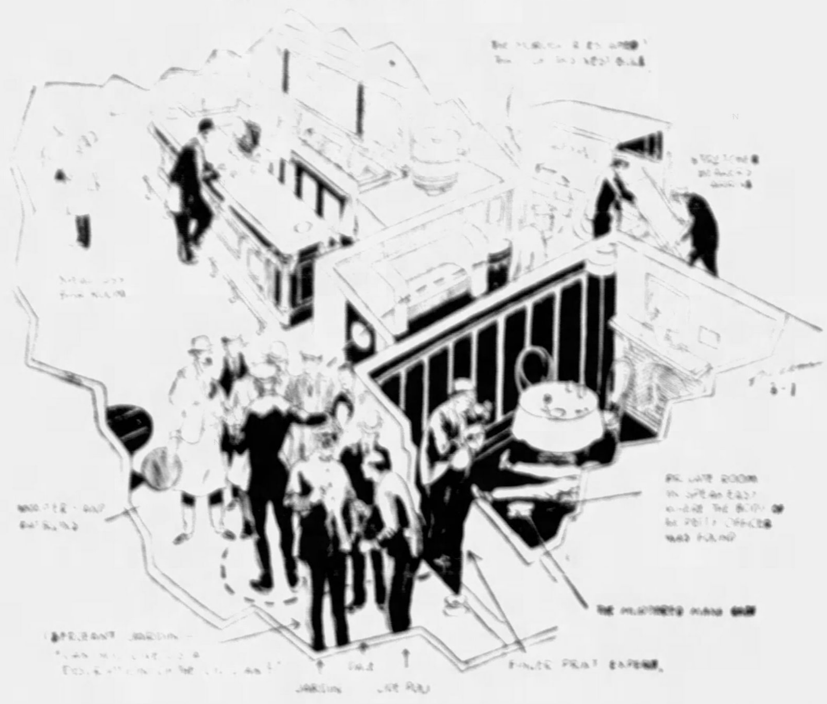
A Perfect Crime



CHAPTER I

Everyone will recall the Delia disaster. The sinking of the palatial ocean liner Intrepid in the unpassing fleet of the Blue Cresent Line will always remain one of the finished tragedies of the sea. Foundering in the North Atlantic during a terrific storm, in which not a single lifeboat was able to remain afloat, the Delia went to the bottom with every human soul on board.

Within a few days of that disaster a tragedy occurred in New York which was so insignificant in comparison that only one newspaper gave it more than a stick. The Daily Journal was the exception and Robin Dale wrote the story. In a way the tragedy was an echo of the Delia disaster although the connection between the two was apparently of small consequence.

It seemed to be a fairly obvious crime although of particularly atrocious character. There was nothing to distinguish it from scores of others, except that there was not a solitary clue to the identity of the criminal. In fact the identity of the murdered man might never have been established if Robin Dale had not written his story.

The case, as to its details, was simple enough. A steamship steward, apparently in his early thirties, was found in a small private room in a speakeasy on West Forty-ninth street, not far from Broadway, with his head bashed in and his face so battered that it was beyond recognition. His clothes, those of a petty officer aboard a steamer, containing no tags or identifying marks and every pocket had been completely emptied. In the lining of his cap, which lay on the floor, there was written in indelible pencil the words "S. S. Delia" and that was all.

The proprietor of the speakeasy remembered distinctly when the steward entered. He was accompanied by another man, who was dressed rather ordinarily. They asked for a private room, saying they expected a lady who was to be shown in when she asked for the officer. They were served drinks and left alone. In less than half an hour the proprietor saw the civilian leave. He did not speak to the man for the reason that he only noted the departure as the man was going out of the door.

A waiter going into the private room discovered the crime shortly after that. A heavy candle-stick, an ornament which had stood in the little room, was the weapon used by the murderer. It was covered with blood, lying next to the body, when the police arrived.

When Robin Dale, in response to a message from Captain Blake's office, arrived at the scene of the crime nothing had been disturbed, and he was in time to hear the latter part of Joe Poli's story. Joe Poli ran the speakeasy. Sergeant Jardin was doing the questioning.

"Can you give us a description of the civilian?"

"I didn't notice nothin' particular about him . . . . about my size, five foot, nine, smooth face an' his clothes didn't fit none too well. Looked like any one of a million guys you'd pass on the street any day. Oh, I suppose I'd know 'im if I seen 'im again."

"You're a fat lot of help, Joe."

"If I'da known he was goin' to splash up the place like this I'da took notice of him all right!" Joe Poli ended with a string of oaths as he looked about the room.

It was a ghastly sight, blood-spattered, and with the horrifying thing still stretched out on the floor. There was a revolting surge within him as Robin Dale looked down at the figure. One of Jardin's men was making a search of the room and Phelps from the fingerprint department was scrutinizing the candle-stick with the aid of a small lens.

"All right, Joe, for the present. We'll send for you when we need you again."

Joe Poli left the room, and Jardin strolled to Dale's side. He held the murdered man's cap so that the reporter read the legend on the lining.

"So far, this is all we have . . . an' a lot of good that'll do with the Delia gone."

"Rather a victory for the fatalists, Sarge," Dale remarked. "The poor fellow escaped drowning and got this."

Phelps joined them.

"Not a thing on the candle-stick . . . . he was wearing gloves when he used it. Glass the same . . . he must have had them on when he came in and never took them off."

Jardin was a bit disgruntled. He wanted something to start on. But in every direction there was a blank wall. How to go after a killer when he didn't even know who was killed?

"Probably just another one of those things. The guy knew too much, found they were after him and didn't even dare go back on his boat. They find him, take him for a ride and here he is."

"It doesn't strike me that way, Sarge," Dale said.

"I suppose it ain't mysterious enough for you. These things are not all like story books."

Robin Dale did not reply immediately. He watched two attendants who had come in as they placed the body on a stretcher. Life . . . death . . . only the width of a candlestick apart. The unknown in front of us and the unknown behind us, that close together and that little width was all we knew anything about. It would be up in the morgue for the time prescribed by law and then there would be some one else who had died . . . and others who had been born.

"No, it doesn't strike me that way."

"What do you see, Dale?" Jardin was interested despite his attempts to be hard-boiled. More and more he was coming to admire Robin Dale's uncanny insight. And he liked the reporter, though he had not yet brought himself to the point of openly admitting it.

Dale slipped his hand through Jardin's arm. He was very serious.

"I have an idea that you're going up against the real thing this time. Everything points to it . . . the ferocity of the crime, the fact that everything was taken from the pockets and clothes . . . there's something bordering on insanity behind it all. I'm afraid you're face to face with a perfect crime!"

U. S. EXPORTS SHOW DECLINE

WASHINGTON, July 14 — (AP) — May exports of the United States were indicated today by the Commerce Department to have declined more to North American countries than to any other part of the globe.

The drop in import trade for May was most serious in shipments from Asia which amounted to $50,000,000 less than imports from there in May 1929. This was due largely to the price fluctuations of a single commodity, crude rubber, which is one of the great items supplied the United States from abroad.

Canada, which is tending to become the first single customer of the United States, received exports from this country during the month to the value of $69,559,029 against $97,904,976 last May. Imports from Canada for the same period were $37,357,987 against $44,330,153.

Pole Sitter Shaved By Barber on Ladder

BROCKTON, Mass., July 14 — (AP) — (INS) — Ralph (Dangling) Agostino on his thirty-second day aloft a flag pole at his home said he probably would come down Wednesday afternoon.

The "king" of flag pole sitters was refreshed today by a haircut and shave. The barber worked from a ladder against the flag-pole.

ELSIE JANIS' MOTHER DIES

LOS ANGELES, July 14 — (Universal) — Threatened with a most noted mother-and-daughter companionship is ended. Mrs. Janis E. Bierbower, mother of Elsie Janis, stage star, died in the Good Samaritan Hospital yesterday.

More like a sister to Elsie than a mother, Mrs. Bierbower was her daughter's most intimate associate and friend ever since the distinguished actress made her first a pearance on the stage. That was when she was a child and had a small role in "The Charity Ball" in 1897.

Mother and daughter roamed the world together. They were inseparable. Elsie rarely appeared in public without Mrs. Bierbower.

Miss Janis never married, and in an article which appeared in a national magazine last year one of the reasons she gave for this was her great love for her mother.

Colorado Floods Do $100,000 Damage

RIFLE, Col., July 14 — (AP) — Rifle and Elk creeks were murmuring mountain brooks today, back in their channels, after a brief period as turbulent destroyers of highways and bridges.

A giant cloudburst Saturday night sent the two streams racing through the towns of Rifle and Newcastle, carrying with them railroad tracks and highway bridges. The damage was estimated at more than $100,000.

Two Boys Drown, One Giving Life For Other

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 14 — One of the two boys who drowned Saturday night in the Isabella reservoir died a hero, but which never will be known.

Stanley Dorovnic, 7, and Joseph Cotugno, 6, had been playing ball near the reservoir. Companions said one chased the ball to the edge and fell in. The other drowned in an attempt to save him.

The reservoir was drained and the bodies recovered.

DAILY TRUE STORY

"When is a joke not a joke?

"When it's on you." Wm. Lane drawled, looking reproachfully at his friend, Marty Randett.

They hadn't met for three years.

They had been taxi drivers in the city. Neither of them had seemed to appeal to any great extent to the fair sex and the same and because of his canny ability to diagnose the ailments of each cab got a job in a big cab-repairing plant where used cars were turned out "better than new" if one were to believe the ads.

At any rate Lane and his chum Randett hadn't seen anything of each other in all of those years.

One day in the spring Lane started off in his own car. He was prosperous these days, for a Saturday night and Sunday sunrise run at the truck in Northern New Jersey.

As he came on stream Lane about dusk a man popped out and said: "Can't you read?"

Lane started to protest that he had not seen any. No trespassing signs, but he got a good look at the man just then.

"Marty Randett, where do you get off trying to throw a scare into me?"

So they shook hands over it. Marty went back with his friend. Will and took the set down to the attractive little farm with its modern buildings and signs of prosperity.

"Stay over and visit with me and th' Missus," Marty demanded.

Lane eyed him suspiciously.

"I thought you was drivin' a bum taxi?" he said.

"Once upon a time—I'll tell you about it later."

Lane went in and met the "Missus." He enjoyed the dinner, helped dress the trout and put them on ice for breakfast and went out to the wide front veranda to smoke and chat and watch the stars pop out.

Beautiful Estate

Lane wasn't exactly poetic but this thing hit him. The home was a mighty fine place, the lawn was broad and wide, the barns in perfect trim and there was a view of stream and lake and wooded hills.

Moreover, Marty's "Missus" was an eyeful in herself. Marty seemed to have developed into a regulation gentleman farmer and the food was something to dream about.

"On the level, all yours?" Lane asked as they lighted up and settled back in the big chairs.

"All mine—how's tricks with you?"

Lane told him. He was drawing down big pay, had saved a lot and planned to open up a big service station of his own before long.

"I thought I was doing mighty swell, Marty, but you sure put it all over me—how come?"

"When is a joke not a joke?" Lane gave the old answer, that a joke was never a joke to the victim.

"Wrong—somebody played a joke on me—"

Randett waved his arm to indicate his wonderful country home.

"I wouldn't mind having a joke like this played on me. Is your classy wife a part of the joke?"

"Not directly."

"Spill it, Marty. I got a hunch this is going to be good."

"Remember what bum luck we had with that taxi company?"

"Never forgot it."

"Well, right after you had your streak of luck and got a real job, I got in trouble. I was pretty well acquainted with the Casson gang, remember?"

"Sure. We had to be good to those boys. They were tough babies. Did you join up with 'em?"

"Not exactly, but I used to have to do a lot of their dirty work or get bumped. I near got shot when the Dock gang came over to shoot 'em up. Well, one night I was cruising along slow when Spider Casson comes running out of an alley and hopped on my running board.

"Step on it, kid—in and out—duck th' bulls," he said.

"I know—it's a tough spot, Marty."

"Tough? Spider jabbed the muzzle of his gat right against my ear. I didn't trust him for a minute. I had a hunch he'd just bumped somebody and was so desperate he'd bump me as soon as I got in a dark side street—bump me, yank me out and take the old taxi himself. I wasn't hankerin' to check out right then, so I swerved all of a sudden and swiped Spider Casson with an elevated pillar."

Joins Gang

"Mash him?"

"No, just knocked him out—the cops got both of us. I'd wrecked the taxi. Good thing for me some of th' bulls saw Casson hop on my car and pull the gat. That not only let me out, but some newspaper guy tried to make a hero out of me. That was bad. Several of Spider Casson's gang came around to see me. They swore I did it purposely and were going to take me for a ride. To make things merrier, the boss fired me."

"Not much of a joke on you, yet."

"To square myself I had to pretend to go in with the old gang. Pete Morley took the leadership then, because Spider was waiting trial for bumping a hock shop guy. He got the hot squat for it, too—but this happened before he got that. I bumped around with the gang, scared blue. I did some lookout stuff and other things I had no stomach for. I never was strong for this crook game, but I had to do it. Some of the boys still thought I was to blame for what happened to Spider—and I was—it was him or me. It [illegible]

[illegible] looked bad. I was in bad. I got [illegible] and never [illegible] with them, and for [illegible] about a year. I couldn't. One day Morley said he had a job for me.

Pulling notwithstanding all the spots. This is the usual [illegible] N. [illegible] and [illegible] and past. I could fatten a truck. I was to take a big truck load of hooch across the river and over to a big road house around Dover. That way, Harry Baum gave me the directions. Somebody was [illegible] Morley a grand to deliver the truck.

Marty stopped to light up a cigar and chuckled.

"[illegible] never any [illegible] yet," Marty Lane told him.

"I'm coming to that. The first [illegible] was this: Morley attacked me [illegible] gang out in the woods and hijack the hooch. They was around seventy-five thousand dollars worth of [illegible] by that. When they did that they intended to shift the hooch to their trucks and to dump me off on the same time.

"How did you know all this, Marty?"

"Harry Baum. He was double-crossing the gang, he really belonged to the Dock crowd. Harry got shot about a year later and told me the whole story in the local hoosegow before he cashed in. He was trying to get away with a modern rat and one of my men plugged him.

Tells of Luck

"Your men?"

"Sure. I'm a deputy sheriff out here. Well, here's the dope, as I learned later. Someone tried to play another joke. Nobody I knew, some mischievous kids. They took the sign reading 'Dawlin Mills' from one corner of the crossroads and shifted it around.

When I came along with the truckload of hooch and saw the sign I turned. That saved my life. Meanwhile the Dock crowd tipped by Jakey were on the other road waiting. As soon as Morley and his crowd came they intended to plug everyone and take the hooch. Well, they plugged everyone except Jakey, who, being in on it, slipped off the back of the truck. But there was no hooch, because I was on the wrong road miles away and going still further. When I finally came to a great big place that looked like a roadhouse I drove right into the big car shed. I thought this was the place. A couple of men came out and asked me what I wanted. I'd clipped open a case and hit up some of the stuff, so was feeling pretty pert and saucy.

They made me get down and they started to examine what was in the truck.

"'Hey,' one of the guys said, 'I thought Joe Brunnel was going to deliver this, and I thought he was only going to send out 5,000 cases, and I thought he delivered in a smaller truck—this thing is bigger than a house.'

"Well, I saw that something was wrong but I kept still. That is, all I said was, 'Here's what they sent with me. If you don't want it, say so—'

"'Oh, we want it—we'll pay for it right now. Come on in.' I had a gat with me, of course, and I was pretty wise. I didn't want to be bumped. 'I stick right here until you boys decide,' I insisted.

"'Lend a hand—we'll go through it and give you the cash if it's real and not phoney.'

"Well, sir, they unloaded the stuff and they sampled plenty until they were pretty well lit. Then one of the men came out with a little black bag. 'The Jack's in here. You better come in and get some grub. It's an all night run back and there are a lot of agents on the road, they'll guess you came here with that fool truck,' I was told.

Buys Farm

"I went on, never suspecting until they paid me the money but what I had been at the right place. A swell-looking girl brought in plenty of eats. The poor kid had been crying. I asked her what was troubling her and damned if the little dame didn't explain how she had answered an advertisement to work at a country hotel and found herself that morning in this dump. She was frantic. She didn't have much money, she didn't know how to get away and she was afraid to stay there over night because she had learned what sort of a place it was.

"Well, sir, I was feeling mighty good just then. I had forty grand, in cash. I liked the looks of the girl and I wanted to get away from there.

"'Listen, Kid,' I said, 'you're in bad if you stay in this dump tonight, and, believe it or not, I won't bite you. Why not step out with me right now?'

"I went out on the big veranda. She followed me. We just stepped off and around to that big shed. I put her in a little roadster, pushed it over the edge of the hill, hopped on, coasted down without a sound and got away. We drove all night and most of the next day, coming up here. This was a wreck of an old farm that had belonged to this girl's family. It was being sold for taxes. I bought it. I married the nice little girl. I fixed up the farm—and if that wasn't a couple of swell jokes to play on a guy I'm a blue goldfish!"

"Marty," said Lane, "my girl friend's brother, a guy named Chamberlain, writes pieces for newspapers. I'm gonna tell him this story of yours, only I'll change the names. Is that Oke?"

"Oke," said Marty.

Q.—Dear Aunt Bella: How can I win the man I love? I'm sixteen and he is twenty-five. Every time he cuts my hair (he's a barber) I thrill at the touch of his hand. I'd love to go out with him, but he never asks for a date. How can I make him care for me as I care for him?—HATTIE.

Ans.—

Hattie, ain't you ashamed! Get another barber. Leave this man alone. Polish floors, do housework—anything to get him out of your mind. He is a married man. And next time you get a chance, drop me a line and tell me the barber's name and address. I need a haircut if ever a woman did. I been takin' haircuts off'n an old walrus who gives me a pain in the neck. They ain't any more romance about him than a rabbit.

A Tour of Pennsylvania Also Offers Pleasures

The Rev. Dr. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, is conducting a party of 85 Pittsburghers on a trip to Rome. The Rev. Dr. Carl August Voss, pastor of the Smithfield Street German Evangelical Protestant Church, is acting as guide to another party of 70 from here on a tour of Europe. And hundreds—perhaps thousands—of others from the Pittsburgh district are spending the summer abroad.

They are fortunate in having the opportunity to view the beauties and wonders of the Old World. But those who lack the time and money for such a trip need not be envious. They, too, may see wonderful and beautiful things right here in Pennsylvania.

At a recent public meeting of the Audubon Society of Sewickley Rudyerd Boulton, of the Carnegie Museum, gave a short talk about a previously unexplored region of Africa, from which he has just returned. Norman McClintock, of the University of Pittsburgh, who followed Mr. Boulton on the program, said half apologetically that his talk would deal with commonplace things. But what a revelation it was! He held the audience enthralled as he disclosed, with motion pictures, things about familiar birds and flowers that they had never dreamed of before.

There are equally enthralling possibilities in a tour of Pennsylvania.

Have you visited the Cook Forest, or Heart's Content, or McConnell's Mills? Have you seen the bald eagles on Presque Isle? Have you climbed Negro Mountain, in Somerset County, the highest eminence in the state? Have you explored the subterranean lake in Penn's Cave in Center County? Have you inspected the antiques in the museum that the State Historical Commission maintains in the curious old Great House at Ambridge?

There are hundreds of other places in Pennsylvania equally worth a visit. If they were in Europe and you were making a trip abroad, you would be sure to visit them, and on your return would speak of them enthusiastically to your friends.

Are you familiar with the folklore of Pennsylvania? Did you ever hear of Genevieve Loverhill, heroine of many a hair-raising legend? Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, former publisher of the Altoona Tribune, now United States minister to Bulgaria, went through the mountains of Pennsylvania, talked to the old people, and collected enough legends to fill several volumes.

These things are mentioned as mere suggestions of the possibilities that lie in a tour of Pennsylvania. The State Department of Highways issues, gratis, an attractive illustrated booklet that will tell you of many things worth seeing.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

The sooner the belief in maternal impressions and the suggestibility of embryos disappears, the better; it can result in nothing but waste time and a crop of false hopes, unnecessary fears and imaginary troubles.

H. G. Wells

Breeders cherish many other unwarranted beliefs. There is an amusing tangle of myths about sex-determination which will be touched on later.

Another very widespread belief is that there exists a quality called "vigor," a vigor that can be seen in the health and strength and activity of the individual creature, which enables it to stamp its own personal characteristics more indelibly on its offspring.

Suppose for example, we mate a black bull with a red cow; this belief would have it that if the bull is strong and vigorous, the chance of black calves will be greater than if he is weak and ailing. And all sorts of further embroideries of the theory have been made. Here again, however, careful experiment has shown that there is nothing in the idea.

So long, it appears, as the organism is not so feeble as to be incapable of reproduction, the genes which it transmits are working genes and their shuffling and assortment goes on in the usual way.

We do not, of course, imply that all sires have equal powers of affecting the offspring. Some have a higher proportion of dominant genes than others, and will therefore be responsible for more of the characters that appear in the offspring.

This is the explanation of what breeders, in pre-Mendelian days, called "prepotence." But there is no reason whatever why such prepotence should manifest itself as unusual physical well-being in its possessor.

A somewhat similar idea is that individuals which are ill or underdeveloped or past their prime will give less vigorous offspring than their more healthy or youthful rivals.

In females there is an obvious basis for this belief, for the female has the nursing of the unborn young. But in males it appears simply not to be true. However ill or old a male may be, the character of the offspring which he sires will not be affected, provided he is able to sire them at all.

If he can still produce spermatozoa capable of fertilization, they will, it appears, still be normal, equipped with all the proper hereditary outfit in full working order: if they are abnormal, they will be incapable of effecting fertilization.

The unwillingness of breeders to use old sires has meant that there is little animal evidence bearing on the question; but there is plenty among human beings, in the shape of the children of marriages of old men and young wives.

There is no evidence whatever that such children are less vigorous or healthy or intelligent than the children of younger men, any more than that the children of women over 40 are in any way below the level of the children of younger mothers.

So long as the human frame can go on producing reproductive cells, the reproductive cells continue eternally the same, themselves neither young nor old.

Such views as we have dealt with were excusable in the days when men were still groping in the dark for any clue as to the mechanism of heredity. They are so no longer. Today the main principles of that mechanism are clear.

Practical breeding will never cease to be an art; but it now has the opportunity of becoming a science as well, and is doing so by shedding the superstitions and often meaningless traditions with which it is still encumbered.

In the Far Antarctic

Frenchmen Erect a Proof of Faith and Gratitude.

IMPRESSIVE SCENE IN A COLD, FAR-OFF LAND.

A party of French scientists, exploring and recording observations near the South Pole, erected this monument, a figure of Christ upon the cross, on the bleak shore of Port Jeanne d'Arc, on Kerguelen Island.

The scientists have returned to France, taking with them their records and adding them to the knowledge of human beings. This shore, far away in the cold Antarctic, is deserted. The sun shines feebly, as it sets, and the carved image of the Saviour looks out toward the west.

Devout men and women, and many lacking definite and positive faith, will look upon this picture with interest and reverence.

For more than nineteen hundred years Christ's example and sacrifice have lighted the world, comforted dark places, protected poor women and children, checked cruelty, and held out hope hereafter to millions.

The French scientists, erecting this cross in the Antarctic, left a reminder of mercy and kindness there when they came away that will comfort and cheer those visiting that barren shore hereafter.

For Mr. Ripley

This Is Fact.

Now and then you are reminded that fact is stranger than fiction.

London, for example, is the home of many queer things, if you know where to look for them. But possibly the queerest thing in London is an obscure club, so exclusive that even King George or the Prince of Wales would be blackballed if either applied for membership.

The sole qualifications for admission are that you can pay the dues, that you are sane, and that at one time you were a lunatic.

A certificate of previous insanity from a recognized asylum is insisted upon.

The membership list is fairly large, and would be much larger except that many candidates have been rejected because they had forged their credentials!

"Bugs" Baer Says:

We Needn't Answer

Appellate Division rules that a young lawyer does not have to know who discovered America.

We didn't know it was a secret.

"Bugs" Baer

It all started when Jack Brennan, young law student, was being examined by the usual committee on new business. The examination was to determine Jack's fitness and character.

A young lawyer should always start his career with character. He can incorporate himself later on.

They asked him who discovered America and he refused to answer by advice of some prehistoric counsel. What has the discovery of America got to do with a young lawyer's character?

It was ruled a nonsensical question. And it's getting funnier every day.

We think the committee decided correctly. There must have been a stranger on it.

Every day we are asked foolish questions by boards and committees. You go to the wharf to ask for the nearest foreign country that will make you a tourist and some important guy asks:

"How many leaves are on an artichoke?" The answer is "Too many." But how are you going to know that if you don't come from an old line of artichokes?

When you register for an election a man says, "For what is the state of Connecticut famous?" It's famous for being close to New York. But why ask that when you are going to vote for a man who lives in California, never rode a bicycle and doesn't know that William and Mary is a college instead of a brother and sister?

When you go into a grocery store to buy a can of condensed watermelon the man doesn't ask you who carried the banner at the Battle of Flodden Floe. No, he gives you what you ask for and doesn't want to know how halitosis looks when it's frozen.

And a young lawyer can be happy in America without wanting to know how it got here, who discovered it and why didn't he protect himself by a patent.

It ain't a bad place to live. But the first thing you know the questions are going to eat up all the answers and our future education will depend on billboards, blindfold tests and light, detective fiction gleaned from a few chapters of alphabetical soup with the sequel in the saucer.

There is more waste motion with the tongue than there is with a broken piston shaft. We think that most legal and governmental questions are asked because the man wants to find out himself.

EINSTEIN'S VIEWS ON SPACE

By Archibald Henderson

Einstein has evolved a new theory! Sick or well, it is the same thing: he always manages to upset the conventional view of things. This last theory popped into his head while he was confined to his bed by illness. The theories he evolves when he is well are difficult enough to understand, all who have tackled them are well aware. How much more difficult and complicated will prove the theories Einstein spins out from a sick-bed!

In the past, on the basis of tactile and sense impression, space has been derived from matter. We think of a rigid body; then we think of another rigid body somewhere else. A relationship between these rigid bodies is thought of; and so gradually we are brought to conceive of space. The primary conception was the rigid body; the derived concept was space. These notions gave rise to the conception of space as we find it in Euclid.

A new era was ushered in by Newton, when he placed acceleration in the forefront of his system. Again, we find ourselves tied down to matter as a primitive concept; for how can we think of force or acceleration except in reference to a really rigid body.

Einstein insists that this is a very significant fact in the history of science. Through Newton's introduction of acceleration as fundamental, space entered scientific history as a definite physical reality.

Down to the time of Faraday and Maxwell, bodies, space and time were fundamental. But with Faraday and Maxwell, electromagnetism got its innings; and we were introduced to the idea of a "field." This notion compelled the postulation of something called ether, which was required in order to enable electro-magnetic phenomena to occur in space.

With his special relativity theory, Einstein showed that space and time were not separate entities, distinct categories. Space was divided into one group or block, three dimensions; and time was a block with but one dimension. But Einstein showed that if we were to accept the findings of physicists that light had a constant velocity in vacuo, we could not separate space and time as Newton and Decartes had done. Space and time, separately, became united in a four-dimensional construct, called space-time.

For the general theory of relativity, which postulates the equivalence of accelerated and inertial systems, the old Euclidean geometry was not wide enough in its scope. A new geometry of space was developed, known as Riemannian, after its originator, the mathematician Riemann.

In this new extension of our ideas about space, Einstein has unified our general notion of world structure. He has united geometry and physics and shown that they are inseparably connected.

In this general relativity, geometry and gravitation were properly taken care of. And this was a great triumph, of course. But it did not satisfy Einstein, for it left electro-magnetic phenomena out of account.

The structure of space, conceived by Einstein, was not of precisely the right type. A modification of the structure had to be effected in order to take care of electro-magnetic phenomena. This is the problem at which Einstein is now working and which he believes that he has almost solved. He is on the eve of discovering a form of space which will embrace all phenomena, geometrical, physical, astrophysical, electro-magnetic.

Is this just a new craze? Or is it an epochal step in the advance of science? Einstein feels sure that it will prove to be the latter. By comparing two bodies, not only with respect to size, but also with respect to direction, he expects to solve the problem. If he is successful it will indicate that space is not derivative but primary, fundamental. That is what he means by the phrase: "Space has turned upon matter and is now devouring it."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

There is, I believe, no selfishness pestier than persistent, public sadness.

Sadness, in itself, is distressing, but not necessarily demoralizing. It is, I suspect, as necessary to life as spring plowing and serves much the same purpose. A heart that has known no grief is usually as unproductive as a patch of wild land. Nor is there any selfishness in the decent sharing of grief as part of our common lot. To give one's grief simply, as one gives bread—that is a gracious thing. For those who weep together, like those who eat together, satisfy a mutual need and have a friendly communion.

But there's a vast difference between the natural processes of pain and a continual, public exploitation of the same. Remember the old verse, "Laugh and the world laughs with you—weep and you weep alone"? That seems cruel, but it isn't. There's a very sound basis for our coolness toward chronic grievers. We try to hide that coolness. We force ourselves to act attentive and sympathetic. But, secretly, such sufferers get our goat. For, somehow, there's a terrific egotism about most of the melancholy. In spite of their tears, they seem to be strutting their stuff! Exhibiting their scars to show how superior they are to unafflicted persons. And hogging the spotlight under the guise of suffering.

Etiquette notwithstanding, we resent this. Why should they act as if they'd done something Big just because Fate socked them one on the jaw? Why should they demand such a hand, when suffering befalls us all? "Each heart knoweth its own bitterness," says the Bible—and usually there's plenty to know. But no one has a copyright on any form of grief. No matter what happens, millions have been through it before. And there is no loss that cannot be borne in considerate and gallant silence, if the sufferer is willing to so bear it.

But many publicity-craving souls refuse to bear anything in silence. Rather, they use grief as though it were a Colt automatic, holding you up ruthlessly with the vicious, black barrel of their sorrow. If you duck them you're forthwith branded as a heartless savage.

Well, personally, I'm all through being a target for the tear racket. If anyone's really in trouble they can have anything I have. And if showing my scars will help any other chap stand his he's welcome to see them to the last nick. But nix on these pests who make a profession of being broken-hearted. Nary another sigh shall they get out of me. For they're not really sad at all. THEY'RE JUST MAKING WHOOPEE HANGING CREPE.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

There Is a Pattern

There is a pattern, though the man
Who bends above the loom
May be too near to see the plan
Wherein his labors bloom.

There is a pattern, never fear;
There is a fair design,
And day by day it blossoms here
Beneath your hand and mine.

Slow in its growth and vast, too vast,
For any mortal eye;
It links the future with the past
As shining shuttles fly.

We who see but a little space
And for a little time,
Can only dimly guess its grace,
Its loveliness sublime.

There is a pattern no man knows
And none can understand;
There is a pattern, and it grows
This hour beneath your hand!

Text For Today

Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.—Hebrews xiii:5.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS.—The Bois is my notion of earthly Elysium. Here Paris relaxes, dreams and makes love. Its mossy trees, rippling streams, shy walks, dewy grass, wild flowers flinging back the happy rays of the sun and violet aura of sky speak perpetually of beautiful secrets unknown to man.

The Bois stands always with its protecting arms outstretched toward Paris—a sheltering haven of cheerful loveliness. Any day, rain or shine, the carpeted green will be dotted with sprawling figures, like a battle field after action, closely hugging the earth—and lost in reverie.

This morning in one of its dells, soft and velvety with the dead leaves of centuries, a young idealist was stretched out on his back gazing at the sky with the vacant stare of a dog that had caught its tail in a crack. Beside him were a package of cigarettes, a phonograph and a book of poems.

I came upon him suddenly and for some reason tip-toed away. Sitting on the benches everywhere are those incredibly old mustached, and gaunt nurses, with baby cabs at their side, knitting—always knitting. Lovers stroll encircled arm in arm and stop unashamed and starry eyed to exchange kisses.

In the fields athletes were playing Rugby foot-ball, polo, croquet and the tennis courts were alive with enthusiasts. On the wooded drives yellow and red wheeled dog carts with high stepping horses tandem drawing the aristocratic Frenchman and his statue-like liveried groom on the sideseat flashed by.

Auteuil and Longchamps race courses are in the Bois as are Chateux Madrid, Armenonville, Pavilion Royale and a half dozen other famous restaurants. There are bridle paths, boating on myriad artificial lakes and every time I stroll in the Bois I find a new elusive and delightful foot-path.

There are several palatial residences in the Bois—one is owned by Pierre Cartier, the jeweler, another by Coty, the perfumer, and still another by a Maharajah—wherever they come from. A beautiful spot. And if Ed Wynn is not kidding about loving the woods—he must come over. Look for me near the Bagatelle!

In rounding a driveway in the Bois today Will Hogg's sister, Miss Ima, electrified our party by recognizing an illustrious stroller ambling leisurely along a bypath—his leonine head bare and his great shock of white hair askew in the breeze. It was Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, whose firm step and clear eye told of his return to health. We trust he did not notice how we jockeyed past him twice, for it was gawkery born of a sincere and tremendous admiration.

This afternoon after a lunch at Larue we visited that squandered waste of architectural triumph that is Fontainbleau. Old Sol was resplendent, and the mighty forests were dappled with rainbow-like prisms and flecks of sunshine—producing a vista of coloring that reminded me of those beheld through a toy kaleidoscope when a boy, shifting, changing, fantastical. But the gray walls, steep pitched roofs, towering red chimneys, porticoes and colonnades of the Fontainbleau palaces leave this gadabout a little cold. Its glitter to me is the glisten from pitiless tears of outraged peasants.

It was different, however, at the village of Barbizon a few kilometers away where the Barbizon school of art was cradled in its timbered cup of exquisite scenic beauty. We went, of course, to worship at the little cottage of the great painter Millet, preserved intact for posterity. We visited with awe his studio and beheld the easel at which he sat while his immortal "Angelus" escaped on canvas. We stood reverently at the side of the bed upon which the artist breathed his last. We also walked by the studio where Rousseau toiled and the hotel where Robert Louis Stevenson lived and wrote. Barbizon itself suggests a Callot engraving come to life.

A French waiter is the only waiter in the world who can bring your chicken with a grandiose gesture, carve it with magnificent finesse—and get away with three fourths of it for the help in the kitchen.

And a hotel here will not change your bed linen—unless you howl like a lone wolf—until it gets a bit rancid.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

A word to young people:

How old must you be to wake up to your possibilities?

Do you think you get all there is of it as a student, for example, when you spend just the allotted time on the work given out?

Isn't there anything in your assigned subjects to tempt you to further study and investigation than you can get in the brief time between classes?

Don't you know that a little research work on your own account would bring rich rewards?

Instead of just keeping even with your classmates and up with the number of pages you are supposed to study why not delve into it to get more than you are given in the particular book you own and see what other writers can give you along the lines.

Comparisons of the thought of different learned men would reveal new angles to the same subject, new viewpoints and increased interest to the student.

Don't wait till you are in college to get the spirit of real study.

Standards are reaching higher levels and more is being required of the one who goes to college and it is the one who has shown a tendency to do distinguished work that the colleges select nowadays.
